New York's Election
A Tender Token
Germany and Russia
Study Litvinoff's Face

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE.—

Exciting election in New York, yesterday, many beaten, dozens arrested, 19,000 policemen busy. Two voters dropped dead while waiting to vote. How annoying to go out to vote, drop dead, and never know who was elected.

In the early afternoon it was said "the hospitals will be full tonight." Mr. La Guardia, whose defects, if he has any, do not include lack of energy, attended to some of the disturbances himself, ripping Tammany badges from men loitering about the polls, mixing energetically with trouble-makers everywhere.

In this, one of the most exciting elections that New York has ever seen, citizens were fortunate in having as leading candidates three men of undoubted honesty and good intentions, while Mr. Solomon, the Socialist candidate, with no chance of election, worked as hard as his opponents, making himself useful with constructive and other criticism.

Because it was election day, the sale of 3.2 beer was illegal. Consequently, sale of bootleg whiskey and "hathitch gin" increased. It was a good election day for speakeasies.

To show that, maybe, some day they will pay us, the British next month will hand Uncle Sam a "token" payment of $7,500,000.

Last June, when Britain should have paid the United States $91,000,000, a token of $10,000,000 was paid in silver at a price which reduced the real payment to about six million dollars.

Uncle Sam receives these tokens politely, his motto being apparently: "Small favors thankfully received."

Yesterday, Germany was preparing for an interesting election, with only one list of names on the ballot, all picked by Adolf Hitler. Those that don't vote for his names can't vote for anybody, but all are urged to "make a great demonstration of loyalty."

In Moscow, Soviet Russia celebrated its 16th birthday, in the Red square. More than a million marched past the shrine in which the embalmed body of Lenin, strangely lifelike, lies in state, taking the place, for Communists, of all former religious shrines and relics.

In addition to uniformed Russian soldiers, there marched thousands of "Red partisans," in workers' dress, but carrying modern weapons, and they included women.

The world would be surprised to know how many have been trained to fight, and would want to fight, for modern Russia.

Study in your newspaper the face of Maxim Litvinoff, now here to arrange common sense relations with the United States, and you will see a good sample of Russia's strength, in the combative, "brachycephalic" head, wide from ear to ear, as opposed to the longer, more narrow head of the American type.

There is earnestness and concentration in that Litvinoff face, which reminds you that the human mind is like a magnifying glass. To make a magnifying glass burn anything you must hold it steady, concentrating the sun's rays. To make the mind do anything you must hold it steady and concentrate its power. Litvinoff is one of many Russians able to do that.

Washington, Nov. 8—Old John Barleycorn, buried with loud hosannas by the drys 13 years ago, was resurrected today by popular vote, and in his vacated grave was deposited the remnants of the Eighteenth Amendment, probably the most controversial statute in American history.

Pennsylvania, Ohio and Utah supplied the votes which ended constitutional prohibition and relegalized liquor. Together they completed the 36 States necessary to tear the 18th amendment from the Constitution.

Kentucky may prove the 37th State when its votes are counted today, but they are unnecessary. The deed is done.

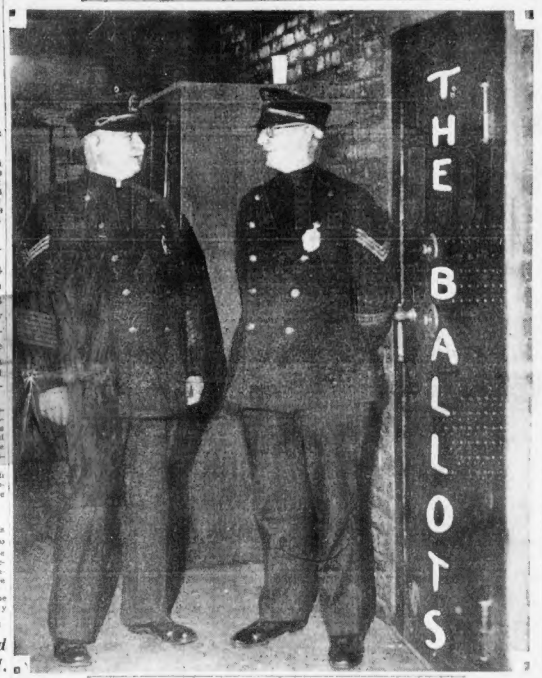
Troopers Asked -:- To Watch Watchmen



A constant guard of two policemen, day and night, together with two representatives of Mansfield and two representatives of Nichols, has been placed on the vault at City Hall which contains all ballots in yesterday's election. Two combinations hold the vault door fast. The Democratic members of the election commission hold the combination to one lock and the Republicans the other, thus the door cannot be opened unless a member of each party is present. Also, there is a green seal along the jar of the door, and the slightest opening will break the seal, thus showing plainly that the vault door has been open. On duty are Sergts. George H. Mitchell of Station 2 and A. E. Edwards of Station 6.

NICHOLS' CRY OF FRAUD LEADS TO RECOUNT

Frederick W. Mansfield, elected mayor by the slim margin of 2397 votes, and Malcolm E. Nichols, defeated by the same slim margin in yesterday's sensational and record-breaking election, both took formal steps to day for a recount.

Former Mayor Nichols refused to concede the election and said he was positive a recount would show him the victor.

Mansfield, elected by about 28 per cent of the vote cast, said he was equally positive that recount would establish his victory by a much larger plurality.

Special guards of both candidates were placed over the City Hall vault containing the ballots cast yesterday in Boston's most turbulent mayoralty election.

Reps. Thomas Dorgan and John Concannon, of the Mansfield camp, telegraphed Gov. Ely:

"The people of Boston who demanded a new deal, and received it, now demand that their interests be protected by placing state police in charge of the ballot boxes in case of a recount."

Charles T. Cottrell, State st. lawyer, appeared shortly after 9 o'clock at the office of the election commissioners and made formal application in behalf of Nichols for petitions demanding a recount. The petitions will be filed when the signatures of 50 voters in each city ward are obtained.

Less than a half hour after Cottrell's appearance, Mayor J. Robinson appeared and took the same action in behalf of Mansfield.

BALLOTS UNDER GUARD

A double guard was placed over the ballot vault and extraordinary precautions were taken on every hand.

In addition to two especially assigned police sergeants, Mansfield posted his own guards, George McCaffrey and R. H. McGeauch, and Nichols countered with a pair of his own, Edwin F. Adams and Michael J. Hourihan. The vault is not only sealed but it has a double combination lock, the key of one known only to the Democratic members of the election commission, the key of the other only by the Republican members.

Mansfield and Nichols have until 5 o'clock Friday evening to file their signed recount petitions. It was expected the recount will begin one week from today.

"I know I have been elected

Fraud Is Charged in Pittsburgh Vote

Pittsburgh, Nov. 8—Judges John P. Egan and Elder W. Marshall easily today ordered every ballot box in Pittsburgh impounded on petition of the Democratic organization which charged "Night Riders" were intimidating and dragging Democratic overseers and watchers.

DOLAN LOSES HIS LICENSE

City Treasurer Edmund L. Dolan's registration as a stock broker was turned in today to the State Department of Public Utilities.

The reason was Dolan's failure to file a detailed statement of his financial condition as a broker, as ordered by the department.

"His failure to report under the law is prima facie evidence of fraud," said John C. Hull, director of the utilities division.

A hearing was scheduled this morning before the division on Dolan's failure to file the statement revealing his financial condition as of October 1. Edward D. Hassan appeared as Dolan's counsel and after conference it was agreed the registration would be turned in. Hassan said Dolan was sick with the grip.

Hull said Dolan was asked to file a complete statement of assets and liabilities on Oct. 17. The city treasurer asked a time extension and it was granted. Hull said, but it expired without the report being made.

Dolan's seven-centsan-the-dollar settlement of his debts to the closed Federal National Bank recently attracted wide comment.

Solons Hear Ely Plea for Saloon-Tavern

With prohibition repeal assured in the nation, Massachusetts took the lead today in steps for control of hard liquor, as Gov. Ely addressed the Legislature in special session and urged speedy action.

The highlight of the Governor's address was his advocacy of legalizing the tavern, as a means of eliminating the speakeasy.

A bitter fight looms on this point, notably from the Women's Organization for National Prohibition Reform headed by Mrs. Robert W. Lovett, and this battle starts tomorrow at 10 a. m. when the joint committee on legal affairs will hold a public hearing.

OVATION FOR GOVERNOR

Tumultous applause from the House and Senate and from the filled gallery greeted Gov. Ely as he entered the House of Representatives to deliver his momentous message, marking the beginning of a new era in law enforcement. It was one of the greatest ovations ever accorded a Governor entering the historic hall.

The Governor frankly asserted that in his opinion Massachusetts has a choice between the speakeasy and the saloon and the best thing to do is to take the saloon, call it a tavern and control it rigidly.

Foreseeing the hard contest that impends over this feature, he asked the legislature to put through other control provisions as quickly as possible.

Besides the governor's message, the legislature has before it the recommendations of a special liquor committee, embodying the tavern feature.

The Massachusetts branch of the national women's organization which worked tirelessly for repeal, has gone on record as unalterably opposed to the tavern.

Other strong opposition also faces the proposal to legalize this sort of place, where liquor may be ordered without food, although

13 Killed, 33 Wounded in New Cuba Revolt

Havana, Nov. 8—Thirteen persons were known to have been killed today in a revolt against the Grau San Martin regime, which started early today and has continued, with intermittent outbursts, all day.

Downtown Havana was thrown into furore by a violent outburst of heavy gunfire late today.

The revolt was intended to reinstate Carlos Manuel de Cespedes as "legal President."

Thirty-three persons were wounded, the majority of them soldiers, as the spectacular anti-Grau movement was beaten back by the army and then degenerated into spasmodic fusillades which threw up-town Havana into a panic.

Eight dead and six wounded soldiers were in the military hospital, while two dead soldiers, and three others and many wounded were in emergency hospital and and institutions in the uptown and suburban districts.

Crowds which poured gesticulating and shouting into the streets when the apparent Grau victory became known fled terror-stricken during the unsuccessful attack against the palace during which hundreds of shots were fired.

U. S. PLANS WINTER RELIEF TO SUSTAIN 4 MILLION WORKERS

$400,000,000 IS TO BE USED FOR AID

Roosevelt Believes Stroke Will Help Many Jobless

Washington, Nov. 8 (INS)—President Roosevelt today set up a winter relief program designed to place 2,000,000 families now receiving inadequate funds on a self-sustaining basis.

The program contemplates the use of a maximum of $400,000,000 from the public works fund of $3,300,000,000 and will cut the present relief rolls of the country in half.

Mr. Roosevelt termed his new program the "Civil Works Administration" and placed Harry L. Hopkins, federal relief director, in active charge.

QUICK RELIEF PLANNED

It is intended that two million men shall be put on a self-sustaining basis by Nov. 15 and that an additional two million men may be put on this basis by Dec. 15.

President Roosevelt believes that by this stroke at least two-thirds of the families in the country, now receiving relief, will be removed at least in part from relief rolls.

Approximately three million families are now being cared for by public relief agencies, under White House estimates.

This is a reduction since April of 1,500,000 families. The President has been informed that during September alone 250,000 families were taken off relief rolls, representing about one million persons.

FARM PRICES UP

Other recovery signs noted today at the White House were:

A rise in farm prices for the week ending Oct. 25, from an index figure of 50 to 52;

A rise in prices paid by farmers of less than 1 per cent;

A decrease in retail food prices of 1 per cent;

An average rise of less than one per cent in commodity wholesale prices.

Mr. Roosevelt also showed considerable interest in a report from Secretary Perkins comparing present recovery figures with those of the period of 1921 when the country was coming out of the post-war boom.

This report showed that during the six summer months of 1921 there were 1453 strikes and lockouts involving 803,000 employes, while for the similar period in 1933 there were 916 strikes and lockouts involving 584,000 workers.

3000 Restaurants Planning Fight on Milk Boost

The Boston Restaurant Association, representing more than 2000 eating places, announced today its intention of boycotting distributors of milk as a result of the new code.

The wholesale price under the code is established at 9¼ cents, and therefore the price to restaurants has increased 2 to 3 cents a quart, according to the association.

The farmer is getting only one quarter of a cent of the advance, under the code agreement.

The association took its stand after listening to representatives of the distributors and others in support of the code. They claim no explanation was given as to who gets the difference between the one-quarter cent increase given the farmers and the 2 to 3 cents boost in the wholesale price.

The restaurants intend to shift their business from code signers to non-signers, regardless of contracts, it was said. The distributors themselves have in the recent past been under-selling one another in violation of the fair practices act, members of the association asserted.

The gross profit to restaurants on the half-pint bottle of milk is said to have been cut from 2¾ cents to 1¼ cents by the advance in the wholesale price.

LIGHT PROBE IS LAUNCHED

Lawrence, Nov. 8—Despite the fact that Mayor White has not signed the contract for the work, the investigation into the holdings of the New England Power Co. by the firm of Rice & Allen has been under way for two weeks, it was revealed today by Alderman Galvin, director of public safety.

The purpose of the survey is to effect, if possible, a sizeable saving for the city in street lighting bills. The mayor steadfastly has refused to sign the contract.

Marie Dressler to Be Feted Tonight

Hollywood, Nov. 8 (INS)—Gov. James Rolph, Jr., other state and city officials and stars of filmland were to honor Marie Dressler, veteran actress, at her 62d birthday dinner-dance party tomorrow night on the stage of a motion picture studio.

Among those who will participate are Mary Pickford, Norma Shearer, May Robson, Lionel Barrymore, Polly Moran, Jeanette MacDonald, Nelson Eddy and Jimmy Durant.

New Man-Hunt Launched for Widow's Slayer

Rockport, Nov. 8—An intensive manhunt was on today throughout the northern tip of Cape Ann for the torch slayer of Mrs. Augusta Johnson, following the discovery that food has been stolen recently from a local home.

In the belief the murderer is hiding close at hand, 12 additional state troopers joined four already here, and with state detectives started at daybreak to search every ravine, quarry and shed.

The latest report of the marauder was received as Dist.-Atty. Cregg was in conference in Town Hall with detectives and state and local police.

A telephone call was received from Mrs. Francis P. Griffith, who lives in Pigeon Hill st., about 50 yards from the house where Mrs. Johnson's body was found beaten and burned.

HAD SEEN PROWLER

Mrs. Griffith reported that on returning home shortly after nightfall, she found a screen had been wrenched off her house, a window on a back porch raised, and a quart and a half of milk stolen, together with food. She had previously reported seeing a prowler peering through a back window.

Three automobiles loaded with state and local police sped to Mrs. Griffith's home, and the surrounding neighborhood was searched without avail. Convinced that the man sought is in hiding nearby, Dist. Atty. Cregg ordered out the additional troopers and launched the manhunt at daybreak.

WOMEN PANIC STRICKEN

His action followed an appeal from local selectmen that the investigation be pushed. Townfolk are terrified, barricading themselves into their homes nightly, and many, including some women, are carrying guns.

Dist. Atty Cregg said:

"We are doing everything in our power. I must confess that we are fighting a very blind proposition, but we've got to get this killer and we will."

The window raised by the prowler was removed from Mrs. Griffith's house, and will be examined for fingerprints by Sergt. J. Warren Toelken of the state police.

AL SMITH LOAN IS BARED IN SENATE QUIZ

Democratic Leader in Stock Deal With Raskob, Couch

Washington, Nov. 8 — Senate stock market investigators said today the Chase National Bank had submitted evidence showing loans of several hundred thousand dollars to Alfred E. Smith and other participants in a syndicate stock account shortly after the market collapse of 1929.

Smith, Democratic leader, and Norman H. Davis, America's roving ambassador, headed a list of political leaders who participated after the market crash of 1929 in syndicate operations, partially financed by the Chase Bank.

Some of Smith's associates in one syndicate were John J. Raskob, former Democratic national chairman; William F. Kenny, his bosom friend, and Arthur Lehman, banker brother of the present governor of New York. With othe associates, they borrowed about $779,000 to finance a syndicate operation that started after the crash of October, 1929.

The associates of Davis in a different syndicate were Harvey C. Couch, director of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation; W. W. Aitchsburg, president of the Pennsylvania railroad and former Republican national committeeman of Pennsylvania; E. A. Yates of the Alabama Power Company, Roger Caldwell of Nashville, Tenn., and Charles S. McCain, chairman of the Chase Securities Corporation. They borrowed $3,300,000 from the Chase Bank in early 1930 to finance syndicate operations.

The Smith Syndicate first borrowed $338,000 from the Chase bank on Nov. 27, 1929, just a month after the market crash. This loan was increased, during December, 1929, to $779,000. Senate investigators reported the syndicate still owed the bank about $670,000.

Participants in Smith's Syndicate were liable personally for the loan. They put up a considerable amount of stock in the County Trust Company of New York city as collateral. Smith and Kenny were directors in this bank. The syndicate was managed by Raskob and William S. English.

This evidence reveals the first appearance of Smith's name in the extended financial operations of Wall st. Raskob and Kenny were mentioned in the past. Raskob coming over to Washington to explain the intricate operations of his personal corporations.

NEW SET-UP TO ENFORCE NRA COMPLIANCE

Johnson Announces Formation of Efficient Body to Push Recovery

Des Moines, Nov. 8—Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, NRA commander, today said a "complete and efficient organization" would be set up soon to enforce observance of the Recovery Act.

He came here from Minneapolis where last night he addressed more than 10,000 residents of the Twin Cities and vigorously defended the Recovery Act saying the President can "lick that ghastly farm disparity."

A host of state notables, including Gov. Floyd B. Olson, were on the platform with Mr. Johnson.

Flinging another verbal barb at Henry Ford, Gen. Johnson turned from his speech deploring farm strikes to threaten, if necessary, to club "chiselers and gougers under the Recovery Act" with the administration's big stick. He said in part:

"Farm revolt may be useful but it is no part of wisdom to revolt against our friends. Revolt is a proper step against enemies, tyranny and neglect. But what did you ever get from the gentlemen who are now inciting you against the President's program? I'll tell you what you got, you got a condition verging on peonage. You got destitution and the road to ruin."

Before speaking on the farm situation, pleading with the Mid-West to "give the farm program a chance, it has just begun to bite," Johnson vigorously defended the NRA.

"Now the NRA comes in for some attack," he said. "And from whom? From chiselers, yes, and that attack we are going to repel with all the forces at our command.

"I was charged the other day with assuming the airs of a dictator." He apparently referred to a statement issued at the Detroit plant of the Ford Motor Company recently in which the code chief was target of a bitter fire from that concern.

"The charge," he declared, "happened to come from a man who, intrenched in what he regards as an impregnable economic position of wealth and power, has exercised the most ruthless economic dictatorship of our time.

"In peace and in war he has assumed to be a law unto himself and I happen to have been associated with both assumptions. In both selling and buying he has elected to tell people where they get off with deference to nobody and nothing beyond his own interest and opinion."

Of the criticism that the government is "meddling" in private business, Johnson said:

"It is always 'meddling' when the force of public opinion and the law intervene in any private graft or racket. Why, NRA is nothing, and offers nothing but protection against chiseling and racketeering in this country. It strengthens the rule of the majority."

Lynch Fight May Cost Lawrence $266

Lawrence, Nov. 8—City Solicitor Rochefort today had under consideration a bill for $266.45 submitted to the city council for Joseph Lynch, representing the cost of his successful defense against ouster proceedings brought by Mayor White, who sought to remove him as a clerk in the office of the city assessor.

Lynch took the matter before the Supreme Judicial Court and won. Atty. Joseph M. Hargedon represented him and the bill was submitted to council by Coulson, Donovan and Hargedon.

N.Y. DEMOCRATS GAIN UP-STATE

New York, Nov. 8 (INS)—Set back in their effort to capture working control of the Lower House of the state legislature, Democrats scored notable gains in municipal fights in up-state New York, offsetting an equal number of Republican gains.

Ten Republican cities went Democratic and 10 Democratic went Republican. Three others went "new deal" or "independent" in the matter of mayors.

Buffalo elected George J. Zimmerman, Democrat. Poughkeepsie named George V. L. Spratt, who was asked to run by President Roosevelt.

Irving J. Justice, Democrat, won Beacon. The O'Connell Democratic machine held its lines against Fusion in Albany and re-elected Mayor John Boyd Thacher, 2nd. Cohoes elected John J. Morrisey, Independent, over the OConnell candidate there.

Mayor Rolland B. Marvin, Republican, held the office in Syracuse.

Leon F. Roberts, a young City Hall reporter in Jamestown, turned "new deal" politician and dislodged Samuel A. Carlson, who has been mayor for 24 years. Cortland went Democratic for the first time since its incorporation and elected Frederick R. Thompson.

Troy re-elected Cornelius F. Burns, Democrat, for the eighth time.

Roosevelt Nominee Wins Poughkeepsie

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Nov. 8 (AP)—George V. L. Spratt, a Democrat, is the new mayor-elect of Poughkeepsie, the county seat of President Roosevelt's home county.

He said during the campaign that Mr. Roosevelt had asked him to run for mayor. Spratt's vote was 8796 against 7485 for Mayor Alexander Caven, a Republican, who has been in office four years.

5 ARRAIGNED IN VOTE FRAUD

Five men were arraigned in two courts today on charges growing out of yesterday's election.

William H. Goggin of Tyndale st., Roslindale, in West Roxbury court was charged with destroying a ballot in the Bellevue railroad station polling booth, after the warden rebuked him for talking with another voter while marking ballots.

The case was filed and Goggin ordered to pay $10 costs.

In Roxbury court, the following Roxbury men were arraigned on a charge of attempting to vote under other names: James J. Mudge of Tremont st., John L. Paige, declared by police to be Joseph M. Ryan, of Church pl.; Frank J. Gorman of Hingland st., and James B. Cox of Albert st.

Each pleaded not guilty and was held in $200 for hearing Friday.

A B C secret society retained possession of the tenth and fifth police stations and possibly others.

The A B C, among the most active in the revolt, joined with army units led by Guillermo Martull, former aviation captain.

More than 200 rebels were arrested, among them two score A B C members who entered the airport at Camp Columbia on the outskirts of the capital, the local point of the rebellion, expecting to greet their fellow rebels but who found loyal troops instead.

Soldiers went on guard on all highways, stopped and searched automobiles and jailed those found carrying guns. Forty prisoners were taken to Cabana Fortress.

The rebels' plan, it was learned, was to operate at Camp Columbia, where loyal troops were attacked from the air, and in Havana simultaneously—with members of the ARC doing much of the work in Havana.

ATTACK POLICE STATIONS

They attempted to seize one police station after another, forcing the police to join them. A number of the police secretly are members of the ABC.

The rebels apparently receive a deathblow to their hopes when the rebellious force at the airfield at Camp Columbia broke and fled under heavy fire from Col. Batista's infantrymen.

At the height of their movement the rebels held the police headquarters, three other police stations, the provincial government building, the Dragones and the San Ambrosio barracks, and possibly the Atares barracks.

Failure to swing over the Cabana and the De La Fuerza fortresses and the palace guard also spelled disaster to the revolting forces.

The movement gained way as a group of 1000 rebels, including members of the ABC seized the San Ambrosia army barracks. A few minutes earlier the aviator rebels had taken over the cavalry barracks.

Just before these two important posts were seized, Col. Fulgencio Batista, head of the army, announced from the presidential palace that the situation had been put under control with the arrest of 80 rebels.

MAY BOMB PALACE

President Grau was in the palace, smiling and apparently unconcerned. He declared the revolt would fail because the palace has not been seized as the first stroke.

The palace was under heavy guard of troops with rifles and machine-guns.

Equipped with many bombing planes, the rebels have a powerful position which put the capital in a state of terror. The planes roared overhead repeatedly, threatening to bomb the palace.

Many terrific explosions were heard in the vicinity of the palace. Soldiers guarding the building returned the fire with machine guns.

Sailors at Principe Fortress telephoned the palace they had brought down a rebel plane with anti-aircraft fire, but the plane could not be located several hours afterward.

Families living in the vicinity of Camp Colombia were reported fleeing, but they were forced to run through streets treacherous with scattered firing. Hundreds of shots were fired from rooftops.

MANSFIELD, IN SOCKS, PLANS HOME RULE, AID FOR NEEDY

BIG NEW MAYOR TO START JOB FIGHTING

"It's People's Victory and They'll Get It; No Dole Slash"

By WIN BROOKS

There's a mistaken impression gone abroad that he's cold—that he lacks color. It isn't so.

We talked this morning about that, and about his plans; what he hopes to do and what he is going to do. They are as close as that.

He stands six feet, two in his socks, and that's the way I caught him. A tall man, surely; big-boned, a little stooped as if from ducking chandeliers. He has crowd feet at the corners of his eyes when he smiles. He was smiling.

It was this daybreak after election day. Outside the big Roxbury house there were shouts and cheering and the flickering glare of red fire dying against the morning sky. He was tired and he wanted to sleep. He hadn't slept for 36 hours. Neither had I but I hadn't just been elected the next mayor of Boston.

PROUD FOR THE PEOPLE

"How about it, Fred Mansfield? You're the next mayor of Boston. How do you feel about it?"

"You mean a matter of pride?" he asked.

"Yes—your personal feelings, of course."

"I'm pleased," he said. "And proud. It wouldn't be true if I said I wasn't proud. Yet I know all this is something beyond the matter of a mere personality.

"It's not a Mansfield victory by any means. It's a victory for the people. They knew what they wanted and they're going to get it."

"By a margin not very wide, they knew."

"True enough," he said. "Yet it would have been by an overwhelming margin but for this election we have without a primary."

"You hope to change that?"

"I hope to see the end of non-partisan elections in the city of Boston. They are that in name only. Boston wants home rule. And that doesn't apply entirely to mayoralty elections. Boston wants to run her own police department. I think we may convince the legislature that it is best for it to do so."

MUCH TO BE FORGIVEN

"There was a lot of talk during the campaign about what you would do if you were elected mayor—from your opponents, I mean. That welfare expenditures would be cut. That city employes might be slashed. What do you say about those things?"

"There are many things said in the heat of a campaign that take a little forgiving," he replied, smiling again. "The many people who said that knew better. There will be no cut for the worthy poor of Boston. I can assure you that. If there has been any welfare racketeering, we're going to find it out and weed it out. But the only change I might make in welfare expenditures will be a change in favor of those who depend upon welfare. I think it's possible to save enough money by the elimination of waste and extravagance to pay the needy one more than they are getting now.

"The same thing goes for city employes," he said. "They have been obliged to take a pay reduction. On top of that they were forced to relinquish their separate pay increases due annually. I believe it more than possible that these can be restored, at least."

Fred Mansfield has a rather stern countenance when he's not smiling. He's no man to trifle with. As pres-

Negro to Be on Jury to Try Crawford

Leesburg, Va., Nov. 8 (INS)—At least one Negro will be on the Petit jury panel when George Crawford, Negro charged with the murder of two white women, is tried on Dec. 12, it was learned today.

Judge J. L. McLemore had overruled a motion to quash the indictment on the ground that Negroes had been excluded deliberately from the grand jury.

Crawford, sought as the murderer of Mrs. Agnes Boeing Ilsley, his employer, and her maid Mrs. Mina Buckner, was arrested in Boston.

Litvinoff Bridging -:- Gap of 16 Years

Lips, Not Eyes, Mirror Soul, Declares Savant

The eyes may lie, and conceal emotions, but the lips reveal the inner thought.

After months of experiment, Dr. Knight Dunlap, of Johns Hopkins University, and Dr. John Bentley, of American University here, have evolved this new and revolutionary theory of emotion.

The psychologists explain their theory after a series of simple but brilliant experiments with a camera.

They photographed persons in stance, a pistol was fired behind various emotional states. For instance, and the camera clicked while his face registered fright. Then the same subject was photographed while listening to a funny story, and laughing.

The photographs were cut in two pieces. The laughing eyes were joined with the frightened lips. And the composite face looked frightened, showing that the mouth's expression predominated. And then when the laughing lips were placed with the frightened eyes, they seemed to laugh.

Following this line of reasoning Dr. Bentley concluded that true character was expressed in the lips more than the eyes.

He dissected the portraits of three famous movie stars to show the comparison. Strictly a scienthat he recognized none of them. To him they were only so many portraits.

Greta Garbo's mouth is sullen, he found, although her eyes are gentle and candid. Therefore he believes her character leans towards the sullen side.

On the other hand, Marlene Dietrich's mouth and eyes express almost the same emotions—a keen sensitiveness.

In Mae West he found the greatest discrepancy. Mae West's eyes he found, are cunning and almost cruel. But her lips he described as "lovable and kissable." He added:

"Her eyes tell you to keep away, but her lips say come on."

Dr. Dunlap gives as the reason for the emotional lips, the mouth is more closely connected with the stomach and other vital organs through nerve chains than the eyes.

5 IN 'BRACELET GANG' HELD

Warrants charging armed robbery and attempt to break and enter, will be sought in Roxbury court today against five youths known as the "Silver Bracelet" gang.

Herman T. Johnson of 120 Homestead st., Roxbury, identified Alfred Repucci as the man he saw attempting to enter a house, George E. Whitehouse of 15 Montrose st., Roxbury, identified Herbert Kuhagen as the man he admitted to his home one night last week, and said Louis N. Feeney looked like his companion. Police say Kuhagen and Feeney admitted being there and Edward Corcoran said he followed the others into the house. Whitehouse said Kuhagen had a pistol and he believed Feeney had one. Kuhagen stuck into me, he said, and he was robbed of $2 and a quantity of jewelry.

Schenectady Elects Former G.O.P. Mayor

Schenectady, N. Y., Nov. 8 (UP)—Former Mayor Henry C. Fagal, a Republican, has been re-elected to that office, defeating the incumbent, J. Ward White, a Democrat, who this year ran as an independent and four other opponents, including a woman.

MANSFIELD GOES TO FUNERAL

Big politicians sought out Mayor-elect Frederick W. Mansfield today. Well wishers, with outstretched hands, swamped the little man of the hour with congratulations.

State and city big-wigs, newspaper interviewers, organization heads all tried to locate the victor but he was not to be found, because the Mayor-elect, modest man that he is, shunning the plaudits and the felicitations, chose to accede to the request of one of his many admirers to attend the funeral of the latter's sister.

While the frantic search for Mayor-elect Mansfield was in progress all over town, he was kneeling in St. Peter's Catholic Church in Chelsea during the funeral mass of Miss Mary G. Lyons of 118 Maverick st., Chelsea, sister of Jeremiah "Trixie" Lyons, noted East Boston and Chelsea character and Spanish War "buddy" of Mansfield.

Years ago "Trixie", Lyons, some dozen years his senior, was Mansfield's athletic mentor on the fields of East Boston.

Lyons went to school with Mansfield's elder brother, engaged in athletics with him and studied law with him. When the Spanish War broke out and Mansfield enlisted, he found himself with "Trixie".

Later, Lyons went to New York for a time and there was a Tammany worker. Coming back here he fell on hard times, but the quiet hand of Mansfield reached out to aid him from time to time and Lyons became Mansfield's most ardent supporter in all his campaigns.

In the bitter fight just closed "Trixie" was the hardest worker on the Mansfield band wagon. He accompanied Mansfield on the rounds of rallies, held his coat and hat at radio stations, sometimes spoke at rallies and even swept the floor at Mansfield campaign headquarters.

Two days before the Mansfield victory the veteran's sister died, and Lyons divided his time between the wake and the campaign, with the funeral set for today.

The returns came in; the Mansfield majority piled up, Mansfield was in. And "Trixie," the faithful, had but one request to make of the victor, whose idol he once was. He asked for no job, no appointment and no political favor. All he desired was that the next mayor attend the funeral.

And Mansfield knelt in church while the city was compared frantically by those who wished to do the victor honor.

RECOUNT ASKED IN FITCHBURG

Fitchburg, Mass., Nov. 8 (AP)—Mayor Joseph N. Carriere, defeated by Robert E. Greenwood, son-in-law of United States Senator Coolidge, by 136 votes at the municipal election yesterday, this morning said that he will ask for a recount.

The mayor said:

"I shall demand a recount because of difficulties encountered in the counting of the ballots. There were so many errors made and readjusted during the counting that I shall protect the voters by having a certification of the count."

ROOSEVELT TO WEIGH SOVIET PACT TODAY

Litvinoff and President to Confer Alone on Recognition

Washington, Nov. 8 (AP)—President Roosevelt hopes to begin talking over the business of mending Russo-American relations late today with M. M. Litvinoff, the special envoy of the Soviet government. Mr. Roosevelt made known his intentions just as Secretary Hull received Litvinoff in his office at the State Department to begin the preliminary conversations.

It was indicated at the White House that Mr. Roosevelt would leave to his Secretary of State discussions over the multitude of detailed problems.

After a process of elimination of these more or less mechanical details, Mr. Roosevelt will deal personally with the Russian emissary on questions that are expected to relate to recognition of the Soviet government.

The President intends to have a chat along these lines with Litvinoff after the formal White House luncheon today. He will see him again tomorrow night at the White House.

Attending this morning's conversations between Hull and Litvinoff was the group designated by Mr. Roosevelt to advise him in this government's approach to the question of diplomatic recognition. It included Undersecretary Phillips, Assistant Secretary R. Walton Moore, William Bullitt, special assistant to Hull; Henry Morgenthau, Jr., governor of the Farm Credit Administration, and Green H. Hackworth, State Department's solicitor.

Braintree Schoolboy Ends His Life by Hanging

Robert Bolgiani 16, of Tremont st., Braintree, ended his life by hanging in the attic of his home, it was revealed early today. His mother returned home from a theater and, finding him missing, went through the house, finally discovering his body in the attic.

She summoned a doctor who called the fire department for an inhalator. Efforts to revive him by this method proved fruitless and he was finally pronounced dead. No reason was advanced for the act, police said.

$1,941,000 U. S. FUNDS FOR NEW PUBILC JOBS

Many Massachusetts Towns Benefit by Federal Grants

Colonel Charles R. Dow, state advisory engineer, today announced at the Federal Building that $1,941,000 has been awarded by the Federal Emergency Administration, under the title of loans and grants for construction work in Massachusetts.

The money is to be spent as follows:

North Adams sewers, $374,000; Waltham, Metropolitan State Hospital, $642,000; Gardner, storehouse at Gardner State Colony, $106,000; Andover, Lawrence highway to run from Wilson's corner, North Andover to Lawrence line, $43,000; Westboro State Hospital tunnel, $6,000; Amherst, State College library, $258,000; Athol Reading and Pembroke, state police barracks, $122,000; Westboro, nurses house in State Hospital, $257,000; Norfolk, new prison barn, $19,000, and power house, $67,000; Westboro State Hospital storehouse, $17,000; North Andover water mains grant only $4300; Belmont power plant grant only $18100.

This latest allotment makes close to $7,000,000 for public works in Massachusetts.

KILEY'S SLAYER LOSES AGAIN

Herman (Red) Snyder, 21-year-old Boston gunman, now under sentence to die with John A. Donnellon, 25, of Somerville, for the murder of James Kiley, a Somerville filling station man, in April, 1931, today lost another skirmish in his long campaign to escape the electric chair.

The full bench of the state Supreme Court, in a decision written by Chief Justice Rugg, today denied a petition against the justices of the superior court.

Through this instrument his lawyers had tried to establish exceptions, taken at an earlier mandamus hearing in which they had sought to obtain an order to Judge Thomas J. Hammond, the trial judge, to grant a new trial and to revoke sentence.

In effect, today's dismissal upholds Judge Hammond in his ruling of June 9, 1933, in which he denied the motion for a new trial because it was not filed within the time specified by statute.

Snyder now has the benefit of a stay of execution from the United States Supreme Court, which, on October 11 of this year, confirmed a stay granted him by Justice Louis Brandeis.

RUSSELL BEATS LYNCH EASILY IN CAMBRIDGE

On the crest of a record vote for Cambridge, Mayor Richard M. Russell stood re-elected today for a third term of two years.

Mayor Russell, third in his family line to hold the office of mayor in Cambridge, polled a total of 19,416 votes as against 16,523 registered for John D. Lynch in the non-partisan battle.

The victor carried Wards 2, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8 (his home ward), 9 and 10, with Lynch coming out on top in Wards 1, 3 and 11, the Lynch home ward. In Russell's own ward he polled 2912 votes against Lynch's 449, and Russell came out of Lynch's own ward with 1273 votes as against Lynch's 2951.

RUSSELL EXCEEDED

Mrs. Brooks polled a total vote of 23,047 as the day's high in any individual, exceeding even Mayor Russell's support by 3631 ballots.

Elected to the school committee with Mrs. Brooks were James F. Fitzgerald and Russell Wood, the latter polling 17,347 votes and the former 14,112.

In the contest for councillor-at-large, Francis J. Doyle, present president of the City Council and the anti-administration leader, topped the ticket, with Thomas F. Gibson, Charles F. Shea and Hyman Pill also riding in.

MURPHY IN SIXTH

Roche polled 18,267 votes, Gibson 18,761, Shea 14,699, and Pill 14,179. The Russell councillor, Timothy F. Murphy, finished in sixth place and out of the running with a score of 13,946.

The ward fights for council returned as victors John T. Sullivan in Ward 1, Anders T. Anderson in Ward 2, John W. Lyons, re-elected in Ward 3; Howe Coolidge Ames in Ward 4, Edward J. Gurry in Ward 5, Frederick J. O'Connor in ward 6, M. Russell Cazmay in Ward 7, Benjamin F. Wyeth in Ward 8, James F. Mahoney in Ward 9, Horace A. Skilton in Ward 10, and John F. Foley in Ward 11.

For assessor, James J. Casey, holder of that office for 29 years, won an easy victory.

VICTORY SWUNG BY McCORMACK

In the victory of Frederick W. Mansfield, Congressman John W. McCormack of South Boston played a prominent part. The failure of Dist. Atty. William J. Foley to pile up the commanding lead expected in his home district is attributed in large part to the influence of McCormack.

Congressman McCormack, four years from now, should he be the man to watch for the crown at City Hall. Had he chosen to run in the campaign just closed, he would have received, in addition to almost universal Democratic support, the backing of some of the outstanding Republican leaders in the city, including that of Senator Henry J. Parkman.

Watch Him

Mayor-Elect Lost Dozen Pounds

Imagine how easy it is to reduce without dieting. All you have to do is run for mayor and get elected. Frederick W. Mansfield lost 12 pounds during the campaign, says the charming Mrs. Mansfield. But on the other hand the mayor's wife gains weight, says also Mrs. Mansfield. The First Lady of Boston put the mayor-elect's loss down to the "two particularly bad days." And all the days of a campaign are supposed to be heated.

Mansfield District Swamps Foes

Frederick W. Mansfield carried Ward 1, the place where he was born, started and ended his campaign, by a substantial majority. In this ward his majority over Nichols and Foley, his nearest competitors, was respectively 2582 and 2495. Mansfield received 6268

Republicans Gain Control in Hartford

Hartford, Conn., Nov. 8 (AP)—A "fusion" movement, in which rebellious Democrats joined Republicans against the old Democratic machine, led by Thomas J. Spellacy, sat in the driver's seat in Hartford's municipality today with J. Watson Beach, Republican, elected mayor by a narrow margin of 1810 votes over William J. Rankin, Democratic incumbent. A dozen men were slightly injured and six arrested in rioting at the polls.

Nudist Followers Fined for Sun Bath

St. Petersburgh, Fla., Nov. 8—Nudists outside the walls of the Municipal Sun bathing solarium suffered a discouraging blow when City Court Judge Edgar H. Dunn fined W. D. Bary $25 for basking in the altogether on the municipal beach.

Judge Dunn was unconvinced by Bary's plea that clothing is considered superfluous in many wooded colonies in the North.

The Mayor-Elect

Thanks to a grossly unfair election system, Boston again has a minority mayor.

Frederick W. Mansfield has been elected to head the city government by about 25 per cent of the vote cast.

Six candidates contested for the post. Of course none of them came anywhere near receiving a majority of the votes cast.

Presumably this will be the last city election under this atrocious system, imposed upon the citizens in a palpable attempt to foist a Republican mayor upon an overwhelmingly Democratic city. Certainly yesterday's lesson should be obvious, as any citizen will see when he scans the way the vote was divided.

Boston will have a Democratic mayor after January 1. But this outcome was more by chance than through any sane, fair system of electing a mayor.

The Boston Evening American supported Wm. J. Foley, knowing him to be capable and honest, and believing that he had the best chance of defeating the startlingly well developed plans of the Republican machine to force the election of a member of that minority party in Boston.

As it developed, Mr. Mansfield was the strongest Democrat and his unexpected strength carried him to victory and upset the Innes machine.

The Boston Evening American wishes Mr. Mansfield well and hopes he will measure up to the hopes of those who supported him. His problems and responsibilities will be many. The public will look to him for calm, sane and honest effort in their behalf. It will look to him to keep clear of dictation from any group or individual.

It takes at their face value Mr. Mansfield's pledges for economy and such reforms as he promised during his campaign.

He has had the experience to make him a good mayor. He is a kindly man and the fact that he is a minority victor certainly is not to his personal discredit.

Congratulations, Mayor-elect Mansfield. May your four years of service in behalf of your fellow citizens be happy—for you and for them.

PARKMAN FINDS BALM FOR LOSS

Disappointment of his defeat was softened by satisfaction over the defeat of "two political gangs," in the election, Sen. Henry Parkman, Jr., declared early today.

In a statement he said:

"Naturally I am disappointed in the result of the election for myself and my supporters who believed that I represented more than anyone else a revolt of the honest citizens of Boston against the corrupt political machines. I thank these supporters for their untiring efforts and devotion in my campaign.

"However, we can all feel satisfaction in the result so far as it represents the defeat of the two political gangs which have dominated City Hall for years.

"I congratulate Mr. Mansfield upon his oportunity to make a fresh start for the good of our city. In such an effort I pledge my support and co-operation."

MRS. R. W. LOVETT

"It is our belief, when history is written, that it will be shown that the American has done a patriotic service by calling the attention of the citizens of this country to the hypocrisy, corruption and moral disintegration engendered by the Eighteenth Amendment.

"NOBLE EXPERIMENT" MADE NATION DRIPPING WET

14-Year Reign of Prohibition Caused Bathtub Gin to Become Favorite Drink Throughout Country

Turn back the pages of time to a day, almost 15 years ago—Dec. 18, 1917.

The House of Representatives is voting on a measure already passed by the United States Senate—the Eighteenth Amendment to the Constitution.

This is the day of days for William Jennings Bryan. He watches the proceedings complacently. He has come to John Barleycorn's funeral, but not in the role of a mourner.

Debating is brief, heated. An enormous crowd fill the galleries. The ardent ladies of the W. C. T. U. are there in force.

Finally the voting is done. Prohibition has its required two-thirds majority—282 to 128. The drys are jubilant. They are confident of ratification by 36 States (which came true Jan. 1, 1919).

"The nation will be dry within three years," says Bryan, his countenance wreathed in a large smile—

Dry within three years? Well, hardly!

Nine years later, 1929-1930, patriotic Americans threw open the hatch and guzzled the greatest flood of alcohol ever to pass down the national throat. Conservatives estimate the amount of hard liquor consumed that year at 200,000,000 gallons.

Prohibitionists (and some of them in all honesty) told us that the Eighteenth Amendment was not only a noble experiment, but was conceived for the idealist purpose of abolishing the liquor traffic. The whole social advantages which were to accrue to the American public by its abolition were beautiful and boundless.

DRINKING BEGINS

Today, as the sad and mournful saga of the American Sahara is sung, and as America prepares to imbibe something more dynamic than 3.2 beer, it might be well to look back upon a few phases of prohibition; gain just a short distance into the future.

Among other things, franchised Americans were told by white-ribboners that children would grow up without a knowledge of liquor. They were mistaken. In the latter half of 1930 there were 900 boys and girls in United States prisons on charges of violating prohibition laws.

That drinking among boys and girls of high school age increased, if it did not actually begin, under Prohibition, there is no doubt.

It is next to impossible to arrive at an accurate figure of the number of men, women and children who lost their lives to Prohibition. It is estimated that at least 2000 died from bullets fired from Prohibition guns, or in accidents which figured in dry raids.

Conviction of agents for slaying were unheard of; in 1928 for instance, 28 men were killed by Prohibition agents. In each instance the federal courts intervened and the defendant escaped punishment.

STIMULATED DIVORCE

Prohibition played a disastrous part in divorce courts. The number of divorces, in which intoxication was listed as the sole cause, rose from 1336 in 1922 to 3588 in 1925—an increase of 111 per cent. Divorce in which drunkenness was the sole cause, plus those in which it figured, climbed from 3540 in 1923 to 5026 in 1929—an increase of 42 per cent.

For the first time in history, the American woman hooked a heel over the bar rail and tossed her whiskey off neat, along with men. Drinking among women increased immeasurably and, according to U. S. Census Bureau records, alcoholism among women multiplied 400 per cent.

Deaths of women for reasons of alcohol, not including those who were poisoned outright, climbed 35 per cent against a population increase of 20 per cent.

But year the bootleggers had was 1929-1930, when the nation drank that 200,000,000 gallons. After 1930, drinking fell for reasons of depression.

Two years passed, and came legislation of 2.2 beer. Still we, as a nation, drank more whiskey than we did in 1914, the so-called peak year of the saloon, when 135,000,000 gallons of rye and bourbon whiskey, 5,000,000 gallons of gin and 1,500,000 gallons of Scotch were consumed.

VOTE DELIGHTS FITZGERALD

Former Mayor John F. Fitzgerald today was as elated as anyone in the city over the Mansfield victory. From the Bellevue Hotel room, where he is confined by injuries suffered in a recent traffic accident he issued the following statement:

"The election of Mr. Mansfield yesterday was a wonderful piece of good fortune for this city. During the next four years, where we are starting out on an unchartered sea, it is most important to have a man at City Hall who is an honest man, who loves his fellow man, who will work for the city's interest all the time and not think of personal profit for a moment.

"It is the duty of all good citizens, regardless of party, to give him every co-operation, which, knowing the man as I do, will be most acceptable."

Italy Rejoices Over LaGuardia's Win

Rome, Nov. 8 (AP)—The Italian press was exultant today over the election of Fiorello LaGuardia, born of Italian parents, to the mayoralty of New York city. Newspapers devoted much space on their first pages to the news of the election and with photographs of the mayor-elect.

The newspapers pointed out the humble origin of the LaGuardia family at Foggia, where the mayor-elect's father was a bandmaster.

"The Italians salute the ascension of LaGuardia to head the largest city in the United States," said Il Piccolo, "not only because he is a proud descendant of our nation but because he sums up the nation's best constructive qualities."

French Air Armada on 5000-Mile Flight

Istres, France, Nov. 8—A great French armada of 27 planes manned by 34 picked aviators started a mass flight to darkest Africa early today. Three more planes will join the armada at points on the route.

On the 5000-mile flight to French Africa, dangers of desert and jungle will be braved for the sake of France's military, political, technical and commercial prestige.

The flight is under the leadership of General Victor Vuillemin, desert expert.

Farley Sees N. Y. Upset As Slap at Tammany Only

New York, Nov. 7 (AP)—Postmaster, General James A. Farley, state and national Democratic chairman, declared tonight the election of Fiorello La Guardia indicated New York voters are "thoroughly dissatisfied with the present Democratic leadership in the city."

The postmaster general—who had supported Joseph V. McKee, Independent Democrat, was jubilant over reported Democratic gains in upstate New York, which he received by phone from leaders in various cities and ended his comment with the statement:

" . . . where our suggestions have been accepted we are satisfied with the results."

Although the returns on repeal when the statement was issued indicated that the Carolinas had gone dry and Pennsylvania, Ohio, and probably Utah wet, Farley refused to comment on the repeal vote "until it's all washed up and in the bag."

It was a gay party that assembled in the postmaster general's private office in Democratic national headquarters. Mrs. Farley and a group of guests in evening clothes sat in the office while Democratic leaders in the state and nation telephoned in the results.

When it was learned that La Guardia was to be the city's mayor, Farley spread his hands palm upwards to Prince Maichahelli, one of his guests, and said: "Well, we lose, but Tammany doesn't win."

Mrs. Sabin Ends Repeal Job Dec. 5

New York, Nov. 8 (AP)—Mrs. Charles H. Sabin said today the Women's Organization for National Prohibition Reform, of which she is chairman, will be dissolved upon ratification of repeal by the 36th state, Dec. 5.

Outlinging the principles upon which the organization was founded, Mrs. Sabin said all of them had been attained.

"I know that I am speaking for all of our members when I state that as good citizens we will continue as individuals to encourage and support only such measures for the control of liquor in our respective states as will promote temperance, law and order," she said.

La Guardia Strips Tammany Gears

Fusion Buries O'Brien in Wreckage of N. Y. Ballot Sweep

New York, Nov. 8 (AP)—The Tammany dynasty in New York city has fallen—swept from power in yesterday's elections which gave Fiorello H. LaGuardia the mayoralty by a 250,000-vote plurality and crushed the Farley-endorsed candidacy of Joseph V. McKee.

Never in the recent political history of Tammany Hall has the wreckage of its city-wide machine been so complete. Tammany salvaged from the election upheaval only its New York County ticket. In victorious Fusion quarters, the assertion was made that Tammany had passed the word to "vote from the right"—to knife Mayor John P. O'Brien and "trade him in" as a desperate attempt to save what it could from the Fusion landslide.

TAMMANY ROUTED

The Tammany mayoral candidate failed to carry one of the five boroughs and finished third in the three-cornered race.

On the other hand, the Fusion party—carrying its opponents before it under the dynamic rush of the fiery LaGuardia—gained complete control of the municipal government by winning 13 of the 16 votes on the board of estimate, the policy-determining body of the city.

The final mayoral vote gave LaGuardia 858,551 votes; McKee 604,045; O'Brien 586,100; and Charles Solomon, Socialist, 63,450.

Outstanding in the election was the failure of John H. McCooey, Democratic boss of Brooklyn, to carry his own election district; the overwhelming defeat of Ferdinand Pecora, nationally known Senate Banking Committee counsel and McKee candidate for New York county district attorney; the blow to the prestige of Postmaster-General James A. Farley, who endorsed McKee; and LaGuardia's sweeping victory in every borough, including McKee's home borough of the Bronx, and the Tammany stronghold of Manhattan.

W. A. Cunningham, Fusion candidate for comptroller, turned in an upset victory over Frank J. Prial, who won the Democratic nomination in the primary over the opposition of Tammany.

LEAD PIPES POPULAR

Other victorious Fusion candidates were Bernard S. Deutsch as president of the board of aldermen; Raymond V. Ingersoll as president of the Borough of Brooklyn; George U. Harvey as president of the Borough of Queens; and Joseph Palmieri as president of the Borough of Richmond.

Tammany's sole victory of city-wide importance was turned in by Samuel Levy, who retained the presidency of the Borough of Manhattan and gave Tammany its three votes on the board of estimate. On "the Hall's" winning county ticket, Magistrate William C. Dodge defeated Jacob Gould Schurman, Fusion, for district attorney.

The election was accomplished with the liberal use of blackjacks, brass knuckles, lead pipe, bricks, knives, and hobnailed boots. It marked the most violent election period in a generation, but failed to halt the largest turn-out of voters in any New York city mayoralty election—nearly 2,100,000 of the 2,360,000 registered voters.

When Maj. LaGuardia enters office January 1, with complete control of the administration and Tammany's scalp at his belt, it will be in sharp contrast to another day four years ago when the popular James J. Walker buried him under 500,000 votes.

But the Tammany defeat did not stand alone in the eyes of Fusion today. The national Democratic ramifications of the McKee "Recovery Party" were quickly seized upon.

W. Kingsland Macy, Republican state chairman, interpreted the Fusion victory as "a rebuke to the arrogant attempt of Washington personages to dictate to the people of this city."

Chas P. Ives Found Dead of Exposure

Branford, Ct., Nov. 8 (AP)—Charles Pomfret Ives, 87-year-old farmer-philosopher and last surviving member of the Yale law school class of 1873, was found dead today behind a barn a mile and a half from his home. Ives founded the old Meriden Herald and at one time practiced law in the office of the late U. S. Senator Orville H. Platt.

La Guardia Typical Latin in Tastes and Habits

New York, Nov. 8 (USI)—Here's a closeup of the next mayor of the largest city in the world.

As becomes the mayor of the largest Italian city in the world, he is Italian in extraction, temperament and habits.

NATIVE OF NEW YORK

His first name—Fiorello, is Italian for little flower. That's what his mother thought he was when he was born on a Dec. 11, of parents who had migrated from Foggia, Italy. His full name is Fiorello Henry LaGuardia.

It has been frequently published that he was born 53 years ago at an army post where his father was an army bandmaster; but his biography in who's who, when he checked, lists New York as his birthplace 51 years ago.

He is a knight commander of the Crown of Italy. He went to Italy at 22 as U. S. vice consul at Fiume, his mother's birthplace. He had to become an accomplished linguist. He earned his way through New York University Law School, after he left the consular corps, as an interpreter at Ellis Island. He went back to Italy during the World War to fight—as a major in the U. S. Air Corps. His first wife, whom he married in 1919, was of Italian extraction.

He likes Italian dishes. He plays no games and indulges in no sports but cookery is a passion. He entertains friends by inviting them up for a dinner cooked by himself. He never drinks except during meals, and then chiefly beer and wine. He was one of the original post-prohibition repeal advocates.

PRACTICAL JOKER

He loves music, but can't play a note. He prefers chamber music to opera, and cares more for Wagner than for any Italian composer.

Music is his principal recreation, but he devotes hours to arranging jokes on his friends. His second wife, Marie Fisher, who was his secretary for 13 years before he married her in 1929, is a constant target for his teasing.

Mrs. LaGuardia is a blonde with blue eyes. They live in a small apartment in 106th st., and their only car is a flivver bought second-hand. They have no children, but have a foster-daughter, Jean, aged four.

The mayor-elect's wife likes to go to movies and to read. She never wears jewelry, and doesn't play bridge. She wears ginghams at home, likes gay clothes when she appears in public. He insists on sticking in clothes of solid dark hues.

The next mayor has never been consistent in his political beliefs. He first was elected as a Republican. Since then he has campaigned on Progressive, Socialist and Fusion tickets.

ident of the Massachusetts Bar Association he brought about the disbarment of former Atty.-Gen. Arthur K. Reading. Many have forgotten that.

"And taxes, Mr. Mansfield?"

"Boston's taxes have gone as high as they can go. We need a reassessment of realty values but even more we need a saving in unnecessary expenditures. I can and I will lower Boston's tax rate."

STILL HAS HIS IDEALS

Out front a band was serenading the new mayor. It was getting full daylight. "This man is an idealist," I said to myself. And aloud:

"Are you an idealist, Mr. Mansfield?"

He didn't smile; he was very tired.

"After a fashion, I suppose. I have ideals. I had them when I was young. I still have them. You might call mine a practical idealism. There are many things we all hope for that are beyond all possibility of human accomplishment. Yet we can strive to come as close to those ideals as it is possible for humans to get."

The serenade ended and there were firecrackers. The noise outside died away.

"This city wanted change," the next mayor said. "This city demanded change. This city is tired of the way many things have been run—and that goes back a long time, 12 years at least. Change is beneficial. A city gets in a rut and will stay there until people lift it out.

PLEDGE AND RECORD AGREE

"People know me and know my record. They know my pledge and that my record has never varied from my pledge. I won this election despite a frantic expensive drive of the Moses-Holtomly-Goulston camp to lay it at the door of Malcolm E. Nichols. I'd rather not say any more about that.

"You know," he continued, pensively, "a lot of vindictive things were said by my opponents in this fight. There were so many things I might have said—and didn't. I'm glad. There is always a pleasure in being able to look back and having nothing to regret. I have many friends to thank. They do not need any word from me. Because they know that my thanks lies in my justification of the faith the people have shown me."

PRESIDENT MUM ON ELECTIONS

Washington, Nov. 7 (AP)—President Roosevelt noted in silence tonight mayoralty elections which brought defeat to Democratic candidates in New York and some other major cities and the prohibition vote which saw a breaking of the line of successive states favoring repeal.

Mr. Roosevelt had carefully refrained from associating himself with the New York and other contests. But his national party chairman, James A. Farley, who also is New York state chairman, aligned himself with Joseph V. McKee, who was defeated in the three-cornered New York city contest by Fiorella H. LaGuardia, Fusion candidate.

Foley in Tribute to Mansfield

Dist.-Atty. Foley today thanked his supporters and the Boston Evening American and sent congratulations to Mayor-elect Frederick W. Mansfield in a statement at his home.

"I thank the voters with all my heart for the support they gave me in this contest," the Suffolk prosecutor said.

"We made the best fight possible but, apparently, it was not strong enough.

"To the Boston Evening American I am particularly grateful for its sincere endorsement and support of my candidacy, in both its editorial and news columns.

"I congratulate Mr. Mansfield."

CONRY TO MOVE OUT? MAYBE

What may be the traffic commission's last meeting at police headquarters will be held tomorrow.

Rumors persisted today that Traffic Commissioner Conry, still holding the fort against Police Commissioner Hultman's wall-to-wall would remove the new quarters, possibly in Young's Hotel, before the end of the week.

"See me in a couple of days," was Conry's enigmatic reply to questions.

The commission tomorrow will consider the advisability of restricting trucking on Exeter and Newbury, and of making South Russell and Beldon sts. one-way.

UTAH WRITES 'FINIS' TO U. S. DRY LAWS

depends on full returns from Kentucky. If it goes dry it would make the Maine convention Dec. 6 the conclusive 36th state action.

If Kentucky goes wet, the convention in November 27 will make Utah the 36th state convention to act in favor of repeal, and the afternoon of Dec. 5, after Pennsylvania and Ohio have ratified earlier in the day.

Returns available from the 35 states that have voted, give repeal cause almost an 8,580,000 majority out of over 18,760,000 votes cast. The figures are 13,560,000 for repeal and 4,880,000 against.

After Dec. 5 or 6 it will be legally possible to buy liquor in some 26 states. Eleven of these states already have completed legislation that becomes effective automatically upon the repeal date. They are: Arizona, California, Colorado, Connecticut, Delaware, Montana, Nevada, New Mexico, New York, Indiana and Rhode Island.

MASSACHUSETTS IN LIST

Nine others have set the machinery in motion to complete liquor control laws. They are: Illinois, Louisiana, Maryland, Massachusetts, New Jersey, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Washington and Wisconsin.

None of these 20 states now has any constitutional prohibition laws, and eventually all will be wet in one way or another.

In 16 states there are prohibition statutes that can be wiped out by State Legislatures. They are: Alabama, Arkansas, Georgia, Iowa, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Mississippi, Missouri, New Hampshire, North Carolina, North Dakota, South Carolina, Tennessee, Vermont and Virginia.

15 Dead in Kentucky Election Day Battles

Prestonsburg, Ky., Nov. 8 (AP)—Reports of five election day killing in Floyd and Knott Counties were received here today, bringing to 15 the number of such killings in Kentucky.

Arthur Thompson, shot here yesterday afternoon, died today in a hospital. Officers were told his alleged assailant, Clyde Clark, nephew of a candidate for magistrate, was coming in to give himself up. Clark, the officers said, was severely beaten and Thompson's brother, Willis Ray Thompson, was wounded slightly.

Dennis Spears, 18, died in the Martin Hospital after having been shot on the mouth of Buffalo creek, eight miles from here. Mont Lafferty, said by officers to have shot Spears, was stabbed in the beak.

Stabbed in the lung, Frank Burchett, 22, was believed fatally wounded in another Floyd County fight. He is a son of Deputy Sheriff Turner Burchett.

Reports from Hindman said Ballard and Orville Hall, cousins, and a man named Mullins were shot to death in Knott County yesterday afternoon inafight.

Utah Is 36th State to Repeal Dry Laws

Salt Lake City, Utah, Nov. 8 (INS)—Utah today entered the prohibition repeal column by a majority of nearly two to one.

Utah has become the 36th and deciding state to vote for nullification of national prohibition.

South Carolina Barely Stays in Dry Column

Columbia, S. C., Nov. 8 (INS)—Unofficial returns from two-thirds of the precincts today placed South Carolina in the dry column with its sister state, North Carolina.

Ohio Repudiates Dry Law by 2 to 1 Vote

Columbus, O., Nov. 8. (INS)—Voters in this state, birthplace of Prohibition have ratified by an overwhelming majority of more than two to one the twenty-first amendment to the federal constitution, which repeals the Prohibition law in effect since 1920.

At the same time they wiped the state prohibition law off the statute books.

North Carolina First State to Reject Repeal

Charlotte, N. C., Nov. 8 (INS)—Substantial dry majorities cast in the repeal referendum today designated North Carolina as the first state to vote in support of national prohibition.

Pennsylvania 4 to 1 Wet; "Blaw Laws" Out

Harrisburg, Pa., Nov. 8 (INS)—A flood-tide of ballots floated Pennsylvania from the prohibition sand bar today and, through legalization of Sunday sports, washed into oblivio., the centuries-old ascetic Sabbath of the early settlers.

Balloting in the great urban centers of the state went as expected —overwhelmingly for repeal and Sabbath liberalization. The great surprise of this greatest "off-year" election in decades was the strong support given repeal and Sunday sports by the rural areas.

U. S. Senator Byrd Leads in Virginia

7 MAYORS OUT, ONLY 5 GIVEN POST AGAIN

Seven mayors were voted out of office yesterday in Massachusetts cities outside of Boston, but in five others where the balloting ran true to expected form, today's tabulations showed present incumbents were given votes of confidence that approached record proportions.

The cities which cleaned out their municipal houses and their "new brooms" are:

Somerville— Rep. James E. Hagan by 5071 votes.

Medford—Rep. John J. Irwin by 2837 votes.

Everett—James A. Roche by 1733 votes.

Waltham—Frederick L. MacDonald by 2940 votes.

Pittsfield—Former Mayor A. H. Bragg by 658 votes.

Springfield—Henry Martens.

Lowell—James J. Brain by 1695 votes.

FIVE BACK ON JOB

And here are the mayors who will go back to the same old desks in their city halls today, ready to begin another term:

Cambridge, Richard M. Russell, by 3893 votes.

Lynn, J. Fred Manning, by 17,044 votes.

Worcester, John C. Mahoney, by 7584 votes.

Marlboro, Charles A. Lyons, by 844 votes.

Fitchburg, Robert E. Greenwood.

The voting for lesser offices, such as councilmen and members of school boards, showed the same scrupulous ballot marking. Citizens apparently were applying the acid test to campaign promises and record in office, with many an upset as the result.

HAGAN EASY VICTOR

Rep. James E. Hagan won one of the most interesting races in the Greater Boston area when he was chosen Somerville's next mayor over Leslie E. Knox. The interest aroused in this community during the primary campaign by the Al Smith telegram incident was carried over into yesterday's voting, which gave Hagan a clean cut margin in five of the city's seven wards. He will be the youngest mayor in the city's history, being only 31 years old. He polled a total of 19,208 votes against 14,137 for Knox.

Mayor John J. Burke of Medford went to defeat in another of the day's upsets, falling before Rep. John J. Irwin by a count of 21,115 to 9218 votes. Irwin carried 20 of the city's 23 precincts, which was enough to give him a plurality in each of the seven wards.

Irwin's showing came as a real surprise even to his own followers. He was pressed by the present mayor in only one ward, the fifth, but gained an edge of 25 votes even there.

WEEKS IS OUT

In Everett, former Mayor William E. Weeks rose to defeat before James A. Roche by a margin of 1733 votes. Mayor Michael C. O'Neill, the present incumbent, was eliminated in the primaries.

Still another incumbent was voted out of office in Waltham where Mayor Patrick J. Duane, of silk hat fame, found that a "front porch" campaign meant defeat at the hands of Frederick L. MacDonald, who polled 8448 votes against 5518 for Duane.

With 87 per cent of Lowell's 41,000 registered voters going to the polls, James J. Brain, Democrat, was returned the victor over Dewey G. Archambault, 18,613 to 16,938 votes. It was Brain's sixth race for mayor since 1924, and his first victory. The present incumbent, Mayor Charles H. Slowey, was eliminated in the primaries.

THIRD FOR RUSSELL

Cambridge returned Richard M. Russell to the brown-stone city hall in Massachusetts ave. for a third term in a vote of record proportions. The mayor was given 19,416 votes as compared with 16,523 cast for John D. Lynch, school committeeman who opposed him in a non-partisan battle. Russell carried eight wards against the three that gave Lynch a plurality. The latter made the best showing in his home ward where he got 2901 votes compared to 1273 for Russell.

While Russell came out of one of the closest races in his career, Mayor J. Fred Manning of Lynn was returned to office for another term on a tidal wave of public approval. He polled 21,104 votes, 3000 more than he received in 1931, compared with a scant 3060 for his opponent, Michael Murphy.

This is the second time in a row that Manning has been elected by the largest majority ever polled in the city, and as a result his friends today are referring to him as the next governor of the commonwealth. The Manning for Governor boom was actually launched from the steps of the Lynn city hall last night by Edmund S. Higgins, his campaign manager, as he announced election returns by the light of the red fire of a huge victory parade.

Spot Pond Pollution Brings More Fencing

Having fenced off a part of Spot Pond, the Metropolitan water reservoir for Boston and communities to the north of Boston, the Metropolitan District Commission states it has found more evidence of possible pollution of the waters of the pond and will fence off the whole of the north end of the pond.

The pond is about five miles in circumference and the section to be fenced off is about two miles in length, including all of the beaches and all of the parking areas.

How Come?

Rep. Michael J. Ward will explain why his ward went for Nichols.

WARD BLAMES INDEPENDENTS

Today being a day for explanation, Rep. Michael J. Ward, close friend of Mayor Curley and Democratic leader in Ward 9, comprising part of Roxbury and the South End, placed blame for defeat of Dist. Atty. William J. Foley in that ward up to the independents and prejudice. The ward was carried by Nichols.

Denying the oft-repeated assertion that the Mike Ward area is strongly Democratic, the legislator said that the actual Democratic registration is less than 5000. As against this there are 3200 other registered voters, made up of 2300 Republicans and 2000 independents.

After blaming a racial issue, Ward said:

"In past elections the Democratic candidate for Governor has carried the ward less than 2 to 1, while in Ward 10 he has carried it 10 to 1, and in Ward 11 by the same margin.

"It has been only through concerted effort on the part of the Democratic organization that we have been able to keep the ward anywhere near Democratic at all."

The mayoralty vote in Ward 9 was: Foley 2520, Nichols 3154, Parkman 658, Sullivan 139, O'Connell 188, and Mansfield 1769. The four Democrats split up a total vote of 4626 among them, while the two Republicans, Nichols and Parkman, divided only a total of 3812, Rep. Ward explained.

"Thou Shalt Not Commit Adultery.

However, to oblige the Japanese, whom we like, and who suffer perhaps from some Asiatic complex, not understood by us, President Roosevelt will withdraw the fleet from the Pacific next year.

When Japan requests Russia to remove her "large military concentrations near the Manchurian frontier" the answer is not as obliging as that of Uncle Sam.

The pugnacious Mr. Molotoff, speaking for Russia, warns Japan that any attack on Russia will be crushed, and Stalin, Russian ruler, joins in the applause.

Wise Japan will bear in mind that in another war with Russia she would not confront a feeble Russian Czar and his grand dukes, but the real people of Russia.

Austrian Nazis drove Jewish students from the university campus, and in Vienna a Swastika banner was unfurled from an university window. Police used gas masks to remove it, the students having released tear gas in rooms leading to it.

In Montreal, Swastika crosses were found plastered on the windows of several Jewish stores, and on a recent important Jewish holiday similar crosses were attached to the walls of the principal synagogue in New York city.

After Germany's experiment in discouraging Jewish enterprise and ability has lasted a while longer, these Swastika gentlemen will be less enthusiastic about their emblem. They could learn about that from Portugal, and from Spain.

MANSFIELD, NICHOLS DEMAND RECOUNT; BALLOTS GUARDED

'SOMETHING WRONG,' CRIES DEFEATED EX-MAYOR

mayor, and I intend to see it through. The fight has just started," was Nichols' challenge.

KNOWS OF 'WRONG'

"Do you know of anything wrong in the balloting?" he was asked.

"I wouldn't be asking a recount if I thought otherwise," he countered.

"But anything specifically wrong?"

"I'm protecting my interests," he parried.

Mansfield, appraised of the Nichols statement, smiled and said:

"The returns speak for themselves. And a recount will show me a victor by a larger plurality. I am certain."

Mansfield's election is a good deal of a personal triumph.

RECORD VOTE IS CAST

Out of a total of 247,000 votes cast—the greatest in city history—Mansfield on the first count has been elected with a total of 70,039.

Backed by the Good Government Association and a handful of capable strategists, he apparently has defeated the Republican machine headed by Charles H. Innes and Robert J. Bottomly, and administered a defeat to Dist.-Atty. William J. Foley, who had the support of the Democratic City Committee and Mayor Curley.

Senator Henry Parkman, Jr., of the Back Bay ran in fourth place behind Foley, but polling enough votes to destroy the return of the Nichols-Innes-Bottomly combination to power in City Hall again.

Former Congressman Joseph F. O'Connell and Judge Michael M. Sullivan finished in the order named, far in the rear of the real contenders. Neither showed any real strength.

THE FINAL FIGURES

The final returns of the hair-breadth, indecisive and turbulent election, which outmatched all Boston history in violence and vituperation, and on which the demands for recount are made are as follows:

Mansfield—70,039.
Nichols—67,642.
Foley—61,232.
Parkman—29,015.
O'Connell—10,032.
Sullivan—9,158.

A veritable army of Boston citizens rushed to the polls to settle the extraordinary campaign—which in riotous and violent abuse had known no counterpart—only to wake up today to find a cloud of considerable doubt hanging over the results.

MAY TAKE WEEKS

The final outcome may hang in the balance for weeks to come, with a renewal of all the acrimonious charges of fraud that were hurled through the radio and from every street corner in the intense bitterness of the campaign itself.

One of Mansfield's campaign managers declared:

"The district attorney, who was a candidate for mayor, controlled the prosecution forces in this city. The mayor controlled the election machinery. The Innes-Nichols-Bottomly outfit is a political organization and had workers at every precinct. If there has been any monkeying with the ballots or returns, it has not been done by the Mansfield forces.

"We expect Mansfield to grow stronger with a recount."

Mayor Curley said he had no statement to make when the Nichols demand for recount was communicated to him.

Foley, who trailed Mansfield by nearly 9,000 votes and who had been backed by the mayor, evidently had no further interest in the outcome. He was first to concede defeat and the first to send a message of congratulation to the evident victor.

MACHINE TOTTERS

Nichols will push his demand for recount in order to save, if possible, the tottering Old Guard Republican machine of the city, which has suffered a series of smashing blows, ending with the sensational achievement of Mansfield.

The Nichols-Innes-Bottomly combination privately admitted today, in the face of the figures, that they were smashed by Parkman, the elongated crusader from the Back Bay. Parkman went in without hope of victory. He went in to deal the final sledgehammer blow to Innes and Nichols. And he did it.

Nothing vote was collected in Republican strongholds weaved the disaster for the Republican organization.

Stripped of power at the State House, by the successive victories of Gov. Ely, and with City Hall dangling just beyond their reach by the notable Mansfield triumph, they were expected by all political factions to make strenuous efforts to snatch victory out of their disappointing rejection by the voters.

Despite the heated announcements by Nichols, there was some slight doubt expressed that he would pursue his determination for a recount when he has cooled off and looked over the possible results.

WARD 9 SURPRISES

Foley, if he desired, could raise the cry of treachery in Ward 9, Roxbury, where ex-Senator Michael J. Ward is the supposed master of civic destinies. This ward went for Nichols, regarless of the Ward indorsement of the District-Attorney's candidacy. It is in this ward that Mansfield will concentrate his desire for an examination of the ballots if Nichols persists in his plan.

Mansfield's victory was a surprising revelation in all the political machines. He ran through the city with even strength and piled up unconquerable leads in East Boston and Dorchester against the opposition of the most powerful political machines known to the city. He blasted out votes favorable to him in South Boston, the Foley stronghold; in the Back Bay, where Innes was supposed to dominate, and in the Roxbury section where the Curley hosts are most influential.

The mayor-elect, tall, calm and evidently unmoved by the rigors and unpleasantries of the dynamic campaign, was supported by the Good Government Association, which won with its candidates, just as in the split of 1925, when Nichols was the darling of the forces of reform. Outside of this organization, Mansfield was compelled to rely upon the support of the minor and enthusiastic machine he had welded among his personal friends.

VOTE RECORDS FALL

Made more doubtful by the expressed determination for a recount, the throbbing city election bettled its way in a dramatic close, the result hazed and tinged by insecurity until the remotest precincts of the city ushered their results to the exultant watchers from all the rival camps gathered at City Hall.

The battle waged with dramatic fury in every ward and every section of the city.

And it shifted like the sands of the Sahara under a wind storm as the latest returns smashed in from each new precinct to swell to the amazing total of 247,118 votes.

The election broke all records.

Their interest fanned to white heat by the turbulent and vituperative campaign, more men and women of Boston marched to the polls to decide the fate of the contending candidates than in any previous city contest since the city was founded.

Foley broke into an early but unconvincing lead as the first ballot counts were rushed to City Hall from his native South Boston and the handy precincts of Ward 2, where the late Martin M. Lomasney had held away so long and where his successors threw what strength they now possess to the district-attorney.

Mansfield raised his banners to the forefront when the markers rolled in from East Boston, where he was born and reared and where he made his first venture in the political arena of the city and the state.

Nichols, in his turn, raced to the front of the pack by virtue of the support handed him by the Innes machine in the Back Bay-Huntington ave. area and from the Republican wards of Dorchester that look upon Franklin Park.

From then on through the night Foley receded and the struggle resolved itself into a see-saw battle between the ex-state treasurer and the ex-mayor, their transient leads falling under each new blast of returns until the outlying Dorchester and Brighton precincts brought dubious joy to the Mansfield chieftains and camp followers.

A MINORITY VICTOR

Mansfield, despite the victory so glorious to him, his family and his strategists, stood forth as a minority Mayor-elect.

His total of 70,039 gave him 28 per cent of the vote and he and Nichols together accounted for slightly more than the majority if ballots cast by the aroused electorate in the most feverish and exciting of all elections.

In its dramatic closeness, the Mansfield victory knows no counterpart in Boston annals. His margin of victory was closer than the famous defeat handed the late James J. Storrow by John F. Fitzgerald and it was scarcely approached by Mayor Curley's surprising defeat of the late John R. Murphy.

Mansfield carried nine wards of the 22 which stretch from Neddie's Island to the hinterlands of Brighton and Hyde Park. Nichols swept through eight of the wards. Foley was the victor in four. And the elongated Senator Henry Parkman showed his heels to all in Ward 5, the Back Bay ward perched atop the west slopes of Beacon Hill, where he has administered defeats to the Nichols-Bottomly regime in the past and where his family name has been admired for generations.

Parkman licked Nichols. He polled 29,015 votes, pleasing and surprising himself, wreathing Mansfield's face with smiles and bringing consternation and abject gloom to Messrs. Nichols, Bottomly, Innes, et als.

WARD 5 TELLS TALE

The vote of Ward 5 tells a dramatic story in itself. It looks like this, from the official figures:

Parkman	4482
Mansfield	1334
Nichols	1294
Foley	1005

In that one ward, Parkman, fighting like a crusader, tore away from Nichols the Republican vote that ordinarily fattended the Nichols-Innes regime and which they for years had counted solely as their own.

The tall man from Beacon Hill ran with surprising strength in Ward 1, again challenging the Innes-Nichols dynasty. Even in Ward 20, West Roxbury, he raced into second place among the five contestants for mayor and in Ward 15, another Republican stronghold, he tore in excess of 2500 votes away.

Political strategists will always argue that Parkman wrecked the Good Government Association's booking from Mansfield but the plain and simple story, and the exciting one as well, to be garnered from the official figures is that the surprising and satisfactory showing made by Parkman defeated the Republican from Nichols and the Innes-Bottomly outfit.

Mansfield ran with uniform strength throughout the city, but his great personal triumph very evidently was registered by him in East Boston, Dorchester and Brighton—the latter the bailiwick of Senator Congressman O'Connell, who there, as elsewhere, derived a disappointing outcome.

O'CONNELL VOTE SLIM

O'Connell, despite a year of active campaigning and despite some of the best oratory of the hectic pre-election assaultings, rounded out with only 10,000 votes, or four per cent of the vast total.

Judge Michael H. Sullivan finished sixth in a field of six. He netted exactly 9158 votes. Possibly the good Judge was not surprised. He attended the rodeo on Monday night, the eve of election, while the other candidates rushed through the 22 wards of the city in their farewell tours.

Congratulations poured in today upon Frederick R. Sullivan (it seems to have been a lucky day for the Fredericks, anyway?) He was called dozens of times to the phone after it became apparent he had been elected to the school committee. He lives at 6 Adams st., Charlestown, and at Harvard is a crew coach. In college he was a star boxer, too. (Boston American photo.)

Oarsman Rides Vote Tide In

SULLIVAN AND LYONS WIN

Dr. Joseph V. Lyons of South Boston, a former member of the board, and Frederick R. Sullivan of Charlestown, Harvard graduate in 1927 and now one of Harvard's crew coaches, won out in the battle for two places on the school committee contested by nine candidates.

The South Boston physician polled 113,072 votes, with Sullivan second in the running with 80,178. They take the four-year seats vacated by Chairman William Arthur Reilly and Mrs. Elizabeth W. Pigeon who declined to seek re-election.

Committeeman-elect Sullivan is the son of Joseph F. Sullivan, official of the Boston & Maine Railroad, for which company the son also worked for four years as information bureau clerk at the North Station while going through Harvard.

He is a graduate of Boston Latin School, of Harvard University with a degree of A.B., and of the Harvard Graduate Business School with a master's degree in business.

While an undergraduate, Sullivan was boxing champion for four years and was coxswain of the varsity crews in 1926 and 1927 against Yale. He is now treasurer of the Atlantic Precision Adjustment Co., but finds time to help coach the Harvard oarsmen.

All three women candidates for the two vacancies were defeated and in the new makeup of the school committee there will be no female voice.

Mrs. Cornelia G. McMahon of Brighton, mother of seven children, a member of the board of overseers of the public welfare and a director of the Boston League of Women Voters, finished third in the race, but out of the running, with 37,406 votes.

Fourth at the tape was Mrs. Helen G. Cannon of Dorchester, an attorney, a widow of Joseph Cannon, a war veteran, and mother of two small children. She received 41,492 votes.

The other unsuccessful aspirants, with the votes they polled, were Alfred Bettencourt of Hyde Park, 35,371; Miss Miriam Regan of Roxbury, 27,581; Ralph H. Colson of East Roxbury, former University of Pennsylvania track star, 25,860; Atty. John Maloney of West Roxbury, 21,998, and Marion V. R. Caputo of East Boston, 9868.

SOCIALIST CHOSEN BRIDGEPORT MAYOR

Bridgeport, Conn., Nov. 8 (INS)—After a quarter of a century of running for divers offices, from selectman to governor, Jasper McLevy, 55-year-old Socialist son of a Scotch dominie, was this city's overwhelming choice today for Mayor.

The "Perennial Candidate," as he is known, swept regular Democratic and Republican candidates to the background in yesterday's election, and not only was elected as the first Socialist Mayor in Connecticut history but carried into office with him 12 Socialist Aldermen and candidates for all other major city offices.

McLevy today said:

"It's been a hard fight. I'll do my best to make a good mayor. The honor is gratifying.

Unofficial tabulation shows McLevy received 22,445 votes, a margin of 6070 over James L. Dunn, Democrat, and 13,144 over John G. Schwarz, Jr., Republican.

Curley's Council Foe to Demand Recount

In spectacular upsets, eight of the city councillors went down to defeat in yesterday's balloting.

They were Councillors William H. Barker of East Boston, in Ward 1; Joseph G. Lynch of South Boston, in Ward 7; Leo F. Power of Roxbury, in Ward 10; Israel Ruby of Dorchester, in Ward 14; Francis X. Kelly of Dorchester, in Ward 13; Thomas Burke of Ward 17, Dorchester; J. P. Cox of Ward 20, in West Roxbury, and James Hein of Ward 21, Allston.

CURLEY CRITIC LOSES

Barker was defeated by Henry Selvitella of East Boston, the first Italian-American to be elected from that district.

Councillor Lynch was defeated by John E. Kerrigan in probably the biggest surprise of the councillor fight.

Power was defeated by John J. Doherty by a majority of almost two to one.

Ruby ran third to M. M. Goldman, the winner, and Dr. Bernard Finkelstein. Finkelstein seeks a recount.

The conqueror of Councillor Kelly, the outstanding critic of Mayor Curley, is Martin H. Tobin.

Former Councillor Burke was defeated by former Councillor Robert Gardiner Wilson.

Wilson thus avenged his defeat by Burke two years ago.

Councillor Cox was bested in the West Roxbury district by J. F. Fitzley, by more than 1000 votes.

Atty. James Agnew of Ward 21 Allston, was a surprising victor over Councillor Hein, amassing more than a two-to-one victory.

The bitter fight in Ward 2, where Rep. Edward P. Bacigalupo challenged the Hendricks Club nominee, City Councillor John I. Fitzgerald, and was expelled from the club, resulted in an overwhelming victory for Fitzgerald.

Councillor Thomas H. Green of Charlestown, a Nichols man, was returned victor over James J. Kiley, his nearest competitor, by approximately 700 votes.

In Ward 4, George W. Roberts was elected over his two competitors, by a vote of five to one.

Former Rep. Henry L. Shattuck of the Back Bay, Ward 5, had no contest.

Councillor George Donovan, in a field of eight, was an easy winner, receiving 3208 votes to 2210 for Michael J. Mahoney, his closest competitor.

In Tammany ward 8, Councillor John F. Dowd, after a bitter battle waged against him by Rep. Anthony A. McNulty, was returned by a vote of two to one.

Councillor Richard D. Gleason of Ward 3, Roxbury, was an easy winner over two opponents.

Councillor Edward L. Englert was re-elected handily in a field of eight, and Councillor Edward M. Braekman, who held one of the few G. G. A. indorsements, was an easy victor over his five competitors, one of whom was ex-Councillor Herman L. Bush.

President Joseph McGrath, of Dorchester, won by a total of 134 votes over former Rep. Peter J. Fitzgerald. Here a recount has been asked by Fitzgerald.

Councillor Albert L. Fish, of Dorchester, was re-elected by 111 votes over John J. McGrath, his nearest opponent in a field of seven.

Councillor Clement A. Norton, re-elected in Ward 18, today issued a formal statement, thanking his supporters and offering his services to those who opposed Him.

"I shall walk more humbly than ever, appreciating how fortunate I was to win while candidates abler than I were defeated," he said.

Another easy winner was Councillor P. A. Murray of Jamaica Plain. Murray represents the ward in which Mayor Curley and former Mayor Nichols reside.

Edward M. Gallagher was returned by a decisive majority in Ward 22, Brighton. H. F. Rooney with a vote of 3326 was his nearest opponent. Gallagher received 6462

Fuller Offers Aid to Mansfield

Former Governor Alvan T. Fuller, who supported Henry Parkman, Jr., in the mayoralty campaign, congratulated Boston today upon the election of Mansfield. He issued the following statement:

"Boston is to be congratulated upon the election of a mayor whose honesty and integrity of purpose has never been questioned.

"It is with complete confidence in the administration of the city's affairs during the coming four years that I offer my congratulations to Mayor-elect Mansfield and promise him my aid and co-operation in any way or manner in which I can be of help in the arduous task that lies before him."

MRS. MANSFIELD CALM AS USUAL IN VICTORY

Boston's First Lady, Mrs. Lena Mansfield, is a shy, modest woman of distinct poise and extreme calm.

She does not meet situations nervously. She simply waits until they are over and then appraises them.

Although confident of her husband's victory, she was not positive he would win, she said last night, sitting back for a moment after her husband had broadcast his message of thanks to the radio audience for his victory as Mayor of Boston.

Calmly surveying all before her — crowds of excited, half-hysterical, victory-intoxicated supporters—she sat quietly by herself.

EVER AT HIS SIDE

Mrs. Mansfield said she sat with her husband all through the evening at the Parker House, where they were watching the returns.

"I was confident of victory—yes, you can say I was confident of victory," she began. "But I wasn't positive of victory. It was such a close fight and it took such a little to upset the balance. But I never once lost my confidence, for there were so many calls to my home before the day that I somewhat sensed the tide of sympathy in my husband's direction.

"Naturally, I'm thrilled about the victory. I am not excited. It is just the thrill of excitement and not for any personal glory—only for the principles of government as my husband sets them forth in his campaign speeches."

INTENSELY FEMININE

Thinking over the campaign, Mrs. Mansfield said that at no time did she experience any nervousness.

"Politics is not a game for nervous people, you know," she laughed. "And I wasn't nervous—not even tonight."

To confirm her statement, she extended a slim hand, steady and firm.

"Nothing shaky about that hand is there?" she asked laughingly.

So there wasn't. Boston's First Lady will be a gracious and charming hostess, capable of meeting and handling any situation.

She is not politically-minded herself. She is decidedly feminine—a housekeeper who has been true to her job of wife and mother and queen of her home.

MAYOR MANNING GETS RECORD

Re-elected mayor of Lynn by the largest vote in the history of the city, Mayor J. Fred Manning was hailed by his supporters as the next governor.

He was swept back into office by a total of 21,104 votes, 3000 more than he received in 1931, which established a record at that time. His opponent, Michael Murphy, received only 3060 out of the total vote cast of 24,454.

The mayor's triumph was celebrated by a victory parade with three bands. From the steps of Lynn City Hall his committee chairman, Edmund S. Higgins, hecomed Mayor Manning as the next governor.

LYONS WINNER IN MARLBORO

Marlboro, Nov. 8.—Complete returns here early today reveal that Mayor Charles J. Lyons had been re-elected to office, defeating William H. Finn by a plurality of 844 votes.

Mayor Lyons received a total of 3784 votes. There were 2940 ballots cast for his opponent. There was little doubt about the outcome as soon as counting of the votes was started, Mayor Lyons holding a comfortable lead all the way.

Practically all present incumbents were re-elected. Close races came in the city's seven wards in the fight for Ward councillor posts.

Democrats Gain in N. Jersey Election

Trenton, N. J., Nov. 8 (INS)—Control of New Jersey General Assembly was still in the balance today as party leaders feverishly tried to retain by telephone final results from 11 assembly districts mostly in Bergen and Union counties.

The election shattered the comfortable last assembly Republican lead of to 20. Democrats had definitely elected 28 and the Republicans 24.

Martens Elected Springfield Mayor

Springfield, Nov. 8.—Returns at a late hour today showed Henry Martens, Republican, elected mayor over Theodore U. Quinlivan, Democrat, by more than four to three.

Unusually heavy voting was polled throughout the city, and the trend toward the Republican nominee was especially noticeable in Ward 3. In Wards 1 and 2 they favored Martens.

Mayor-Elect's First -:- Taste of Victory

MRS. MANSFIELD

A steaming cup of coffee poured by Boston's next "first lady" helped Mayor-elect Frederisk W. Mansfield to stay awake to hear just how big his victory was. They were at the Parker House and Mrs. Mansfield insisted on ministering to the new executive's needs with her own hands while late returns came in. (Boston American photo.)

MAYOR-ELECT MANSFIELD

IRWIN CARRIES EVERY WARD

Carrying every ward in the city and 20 of the 23 precincts, Rep. John J. Irwin was elected mayor of Medford, replacing Mayor John J. Burke, a candidate for re-election. Irwin was the winner by 2837 votes.

A record municipal vote of more than 23,000 was cast, Irwin obtaining a total of 21,115 against 9218 for Burke.

Irwin surprised his most ardent supporters by winning all of the seven wards. Only in the 5th ward was he pressed by Burke who trailed by only 35 votes.

In Wards 1, 4 and 6 the mayor-elect ran far ahead of Burke, carrying each of the three wards by at least 600 votes.

Edwin M. Harkins, candidate for school committeeman-at-large, ran second on the ballot to Irwin in the number of votes polled with a total of 10,703. Alice G. Dwyer and Daniel M. Daley were elected with Harkins as members at large of the school committee.

In the ward battles for alderman at large F. T. McDermott of Ward 5 ran high with 10,042 votes. John C. Carr, elected alderman at large in Ward 1, gathered the second highest total 9626.

George P. Hassett was elected alderman at large in Ward 3 with 9412 votes. C. E. Twombly in Ward 2 was the fourth candidate for aldermen to run over the 9000 mark, obtaining 9373 votes to defeat James J. Kilroy.

NEW BUILDING CODE DRAFTED

Haverhill, Nov. 8.—Haverhill's new building code, authorized more than three years ago and now complete, was submitted to the City Council yesterday by Architect Carl V. Badger, a member of the committee chosen to draft it. For several weeks some city officials have been trying to learn the whereabouts of the proposed code, which Architect Badger produced.

He told the council he had spent many hours thus far in preparation of the code without compensation. The city, at the time the code was authorized, appropriated $1200 for the expense. After he had explained that the services of a typist would be necessary to write out the code, the council authorized him to employ one. As soon as this is done it will be presented to the council for adoption.

The new code will bring the building laws up to date and contains many of the best features of building codes in effect in several other leading cities throughout the country.

Public Ownership Wins in 2 Cities

New York, Nov. 8 (INS)—Private ownership of public utilities had the lead in six cities with two lined up for municipal electric distribution as returns filtered in today from cities that voted yesterday.

Camden, N. J., and Akron, O., voted to build their own electric light and power plants.

Columbus, O., voted 2 to 1 for $824,000 of bonds to extend facilities of the small municipally owned plant.

Against issues to build or buy generating plants and distribution systems were San Francisco, Cincinnati, Youngstown and Portsmouth, O., Salt Lake City and Burlington, N. J.

Truck Rushes River Victim to Hospital

A mail truck with shrieking siren cleared traffic as Brady Gloden, 24, of 3 Wellington st., Back Bay, was rushed to City Hospital after being rescued from drowning in the Charles river. Police say Glodan leaped into the water from Harvard bridge. Motorists threw him a life preserver and hauled him to safety.

Long a Plugger, New Mayor Erases Many Defeats in Victory

A man who has taken life seriously, who has been serious in the pursuit of his profession, and who will—even in the opinion of his political opponents—be serious in acceptance of his responsibilities as mayor of Boston.

That's Frederick William Mansfield, 56, a winner at last after battling, during half a lifetime, for successive lost causes.

Mansfield has been defeated for—the State Senate, been licked for Governor, been defeated for mayor. But he's tossed no sponges into the ring.

If you want to know how a victor's wreath will sit on Mansfield's brow, say his close acquaintances, all you need to do is study the pages of the open book of Mansfield's career. He has been a plugger. He has been a successful lawyer. And he has been the sort of solid-jawed, six-foot-three, thick-shouldered Irishman it's better to have for you than against you.

There's been no luxury, no epicuring, no heroics in Frederick William Mansfield's busy life. Neither has there been much recreation.

EARNS WAY IN SCHOOL

He was born in East Boston, March 26, 1877, a son of hard working Irish parents. He didn't play much in his grammar school days. There were always chores to do at home. Then he went to high school, and stopped playing altogether. High school was an achievement for young Frederick Mansfield. He earned his way, toiling, first as an errand boy, then as clerk, for the Maverick drug store.

After graduation, in 1895, he continued at his drug store job. His ambition, then, was to become a registered pharmacist. That took him exactly four toil-filled years.

His pharmacist's certificate came just in time to make Mansfield useful in the Spanish War. He took that war methodically but efficiently. He waved no flags. He just went quietly to a naval recruiting station and became a seagoing apothecary aboard the U. S. repair ship Vulcan. The vessel went to Guantanamo Bay and towed home a captured Spanish gunboat. In a storm, Apothecary Mansfield was washed overboard. A lifeboat picked him up.

Back in civilian life again, ex-Navyman Mansfield nursed a new ambition.

ADMITTED TO BAR

He wanted to become a lawyer. And of course he did. He arranged his drug store hours to make possible daily attendance at law school classes at Boston University. His law reading, weary hours of it, he did at night in the drug store's back room.

Mansfield was graduated from B. U. law school in 1902. He was admitted that same year to the Massachusetts bar. In 1904 he married Helena R. Roe of the Harbor View section of East Boston. In 1906 he and his wife moved to Dorchester. Two years later, with their slender savings, they made a down payment on a house of their own. In 1916 they were able to move to Roxbury and buy the unostentatious residence they occupy today at 15 Elm Hill ave. They have one son, Walter, 22, who lives at home.

That's nearly all the story of Frederick Mansfield's life to date. Mention ought to be made of the golf sticks he bought a year ago and never used.

The losing fights for the Senate, for the governorship, for the mayoralty, are political history.

They made a lot of Mansfield enemies.

But it looks now as if they must have made some Mansfield friends, too!

Spinney Burial in Bradford Cemetery

Haverhill, Nov. 8.—The body of Ellsworth R. Spinney, who died suddenly in his home, 24 Washington ave., Lynn, of a heart attack, was to be brought to this city this afternoon for interment in Elmwood cemetery, Bradford, following funeral services in Lynn. His wife, Mrs. Wilhelmina (Dolliver) Spinney, was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Dolliver, former residents of Ward Hill. The committal service at the grave will be conducted by Rev. George H. Credeford, pastor of the Ward Hill Congregational Church.

Roosevelt Silent on Election Results

Washington, Nov. 8 (INS)—President Roosevelt declined today to comment upon any phases of yesterday's elections. Plied with questions concerning the outcome of New York's mayoralty fight, repeal of prohibition and other results, the President simply smiled and replied:

"No comment."

He appeared in good spirits.

THE NEW HAVEN R.R.

PRAISE PARISH ON 50TH YEAR

Lowell, Nov. 8.—The golden jubilee of St. Joseph's parish closed last evening at a banquet held in the Lowell Memorial auditorium, attended by William Cardinal O'Connell, archbishop of Boston; Rodrigue Cardinal Villeneuve, O. M. I., of Quebec, Bishop Joseph Guy, of the vicarage of northern Canada, and Andre Laboulaye, ambassador from France to the United States.

Edith Nourse Rogers, member of Congress from the 5th Massachusetts district, was present and was seated at a table with Henry Achin, a member of the state house of representatives. The toastmaster and general chairman was Dr. Joseph Lampureux.

Cardinal Villeneuve paid high tribute to the charity of Franco-Americans and stressed the need of support for Catholic education. He congratulated them on being good American citizens.

Ambassador LaBoulaye expressed his admiration for the members of the Oblate order of priests and remarked on the activity and importance of St. Joseph's parish in the life of Lowell.

The remaining speakers were Very Rev. Louis Rachaud, O. M. I., provincial of the St. Jean district of the Oblates, and Very Rev. Daniel Kelehei, Ph.D., V. F., pastor of St. Peter's church and dean of the Roman Catholic clergy in Lowell.

Singing Pays in Lawrence

Lawrence, Nov. 8.—Persons here having vocal talent were turning anticipatory eyes toward the next public holiday celebration to which the city government might contribute.

In spite of the fact that many employes in municipal departments which have exhausted their appropriations are working without pay, and that city officials are ostensibly turning every effort to save money in the waning months of the year, the city council has approved a bill for $15 to pay a soloist who sang at the Labor Day celebration.

Council had appropriated $500 to help meet the holiday celebration expenses. Then the Lawrence Central Labor Union submitted a bill from Miss Albert Casgrain, daughter of Dr. Joseph Casgrain of 230 Andover st., "for services as soloist—$15."

WE ARE STILL ROLLING IN THE HAY with laughter at Noel Coward's "Design For Living" . . . it was rare entertainment. It is amazing how unerringly he speaks the naked truth and how many different opinions there are about it . . .

Corrine Griffith was even more beautiful than she was when she drifted dreamily through motion pictures . . . she drifts through this in a vague sort of way but the lines are so scintillating it makes her appear almost vivacious . . . her costumes made us swoon with envy, especially the silver fox evening wrap—it took our mind off the play for at least half of the last act.

MRS. JOHN S. LAWRENCE

The two heroes in an inebriate act gave us the best laugh of the year . . . we didn't blame Gilda for loving them both. In fact, we understood the play—in fact, our ideas about marriage are just as funny. There were some very subtle and clever speeches in this comedy in three acts.

Crowds of the BEST PEOPLE were on hand at the premiere at the Plymouth Theater . . . Polly Cushman was an attractive representative of the B. P.'s in a white ermine wrap and orchids and Harriet Fuller was surrounded by swains during the intermission . . .

Among the minks (we use that again although we hate to repeat ourselves, but we do so by request) was Mrs. John S Lawrence in a party of four . . .

Mrs. Charles Weld looked very handsome indeed in a white and gold lace dress, her snow-white hair shining above it. A very distingue lady . . .

Rebekah Hobbs flitted about among her friends, a gay word tossed to each . . . Mr. and Mrs. Sterling N. Loveland of Newton were thoroughly enjoying the evening, Mrs. Loveland very chic in red lace . . .

Mrs. William Duncklee and her sister, Miss Gertrude Sands, were noticed in the throng as was Mr. and Mrs. Russell Burrage and Mr. and Mrs. Paul Clark . . . Don't miss it if you're over 21.

French Ambassador Luncheon Guest

THOSE MEMBERS OF THE CERCLE FRANCAISE and the Alliance Francaise who met for luncheon yesterday to meet the French Ambassador, M. Laboulaye, were not disappointed . . . the French representative spoke very interestingly indeed about France, LaFayette and these United States during the Washington era. Among those who greeted him were Mrs. Barrett Wendall, Mrs. Louis Curtis, Mrs. H. H. Thorndike, the Frederick Whitwells, Mrs. Wainright Perkins, Mrs. Anna Campbell Ladd and Mrs. Arthur M. Beale, Miss Gabriella Ladd, Miss Margaret Barney, the Horace Binneys, the William Spaldings, Miss Rose Nichols, and Miss Helen McKay . . . there were many men in the large audience, among them Andre Maurice and his charming wife.

Society has been shocked so many times this year with divorces in our Best Families, one more will only make them blink a little harder . . . we hear that Mrs. Charles K. Cummings, Jr., has joined the Reno colony. We thought the John E. Thayers divorce proceedings was the last shock but of course everyone knew that John had been living at the Somerset Club for years and it was really no surprise when they decided to legally untie . . .

The Merrill Griswolds have left town . . . they have taken Mrs. Martini's large house in Dedham for the winter . . .

Peabody-Wheelwright Ball

INVITATIONS ARE OUT for the Peabody-Wheelwright ball at the Hotel Somerset in honor of Susannah Binney and Gertrude Peabody on the 8th . . .

The Whitfield Painters (Midge Morrill) are giving the old villagers of Dedham a thrill when they ride their tandem bike up the old Bay road to the Dedham Country and Polo Club, as they do frequently . . . they're the talk of the town!

A Blonde Bride in Social Circles

EDDY FAY'S NEW BRIDE is making a sensation in Boston society. She is so very glamorously blonde, we fear that Boston will not know her for long. This is no city for beautiful blondes . . . the old Boston Beans are agin 'em.

The Frederick Gardiner's divorce of a few weeks ago was another one of those expected events . . . everyone's doing it—could it be contagious?

Nancy Hale Hardin, one of the belles of a few season's ago, and a popular member of the Vincent Club, has recently won a prize of one hundred dollars for a short story in a well-known magazine. 'the social whirl'. .

By Dorothy Whipple Fry

A GROUP OF ENTERPRISING women in Cambridge, headed by Mrs. Julian Lowell Coolidge, Mrs. Charles Almy and Mrs. F. Lowell Kennedy, are planning a ball in Continental Hotel, Cambridge, Friday evening. It is going to be quite different from the usual cut and dried affair.

The guests will arrive in story book costumes, and many prominent social lights will don Nursery Rhyme costumes for the occasion. During the grand march, Ruby Newman's orchestra will chant, "At the Story-Book Ball." That same evening in Cambridge, the Pi-Eta Club will give its annual Harvard-Army Ball at the club house. There a colorful group of merrymakers will gather.

On Saturday night, just to keep Cambridge the center of social activities, Lowell House is giving its dance, and of course invitations are just about the nicest thing a young girl can receive these days. We happen to know of no dances with quite the charm and decorum that the house fetes achieve.

Also at these dances Mrs. Julian L. Coolidge is the guiding genius. Exceedingly popular with all young folks, she is most welcome at their festivities.

Mrs. Lothrop Withington served tea at her home after a Brookline Reading Club meeting yesterday. The club at the moment chooses as its life-story piece de resistence, "The Tudor Wench." Mrs. Charles Bartlett, whose dramatic ability makes her a very popular reader, enlivened the story by her charming histrionics. Among those listening to the reading was Mrs. Parker Hayden, who assisted so successfully as chairman at the Ladies' Bazaar. She wore a smart black satin frock with a necklace of bright beads and matching earrings that added a gay and colorful note.

Mrs. Ernest Soucy in a trig little ensemble of navy and delph blue. Mrs. Mayland Hobbs in a very modish sport rig of pale chartreuse tweed, with tricky new sleeves, and a very becoming hat to match.

Mrs. Barbara Russell Paris in a bright little hat of green, harmonizing with the frock of deep purple.

Mrs. Robert Daley, always bringing a cheerful note to every gathering she attends, wore a bright cherry tweed suit with gay little matching hat, cherry and white plaid blouse looking like a holly berry all ready for Christmas time. And after all, why not? Santa Claus is knocking at our doors, and the first snow of winter has fallen.

Mrs. Frederick Pratt of Pine rd., with that new and becoming hair cut of hers, wears a lovely little fall ensemble of brown and green, such nice woodsy colors, and very becoming to Mrs. Pratt.

Mrs. August Vogel, who is always so lovely to look at might easily have stepped from a page of Vogue to attend the function. Such a smart costume of dark bottle green with beaver epaulets and cravat collar of beaver, a trig little green felt hat that matched the ensemble and was most becoming, completed the outfit.

Her sister, Mrs. Everett Perveye, of Clyde st., also was outstandingly well dressed in a three-piece tile colored ensemble. Very lovely and suggestive of the pale shades of autumn leaves.

Mrs. Raymond Lapham wore a neat fitting black frock with a black and white checked scarf. Her hair is always very beautifully done, smooth and glossy, with just an attractive little wave about her face.

Mrs. Lothrop Withington received her guests in a brilliant red wool frock with wide pique collar and cuffs, and little tomato colored slippers to match the striking frock.

Mrs. Benjamin Ticknor is in town. We glimpsed her in Cambridge the other day, wearing a gay little green outfit and looking very happy. Her husband, Ben Ticknor, is coaching at Harvard.

Miss Amy Lang and Miss Astrid Rice will make their debut together at the Brookline Country Club on Dec. 1. A very charming couple those two will make. Miss Lang blonde and very feminine, while Miss Rice is dark, petite and animated.

Mrs. Smith on Committee for Ball

MRS. SHERWOOD SMITH of Hingham, who interests herself in so many worthwhile enterprises, is busy with plans for the Army and Navy ball to be held in Hingham, on Friday, December 8.

Working with her is Mrs. H. Parker Whittington of Boston and Duxbury. It was Mrs. Whittington who gave a most delightful and successful tea for the South Shore Players last summer.

Mrs. Julian Lowell Coolidge, Mrs. Charles Almy and Mrs. F. Lowell Kennedy are on the committee for the Story-Book Ball to be held in the ballroom of the Continental Hotel in Cambridge on Nov. 10, to which the guests will repair in costumes chosen from story books.

Society Notes

MISS MABEL PETERS, a debutante of last season, is entertaining as her house guest Miss Marian Schantz of Dayton, O., who was a classmate of Miss Peters at the Erskine school last year, and who will be here until after the Harvard-Army game. Miss Peters, like so many other society girls, has been tempted by the freedom of having a job, and works part time in a fashionable Boston shop.

MISS PEGGY WILCOX of West Newton, one of last year's debs, who is at Smith College, went down to New Haven last week-end for the Yale-Army game and this week-end she will be a guest at a house party in Stonington, Ct., given by Miss Mary Fiebeck, one of her college classmates. Miss Wilcox is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Wilcox.

Bakers Offer Bread and Cake to Jobless

Food for the jobless this winter was assured by the New England Bakers, whose convention at Hotel Statler has just ended. More than 800 producing bakers offered their food-producing facilities to the government and social service centers in turning flour into bread, cake and other foodstuffs.

Officials said the bakers did similar work last winter, and the machinery of their organization is now perfected. A copy of the resolutions may be sent to President Roosevelt.

Step-Sister Balks Change in Name

Taunton, Nov. 8.—Opposition of her step-sister, Mrs. Charlotte S. Dugan, may prevent the attempt of Miss Rebecca Snook to change her name to Miss Rebecca Thompson. She has petitioned to have this change made legal in Bristol probate court.

Miss Snook says her stepfather is named Thompson and that she was known by that surname for a number of years. Mrs. Dugan, however, has protested the change.

Cruise Clothes Begin Their Lure

(Authentic last-minute fashions from New York—the style center of America)

By Victoria Gaines

HAVANA, moonlight sailing at Bermuda, golf at Nassau—this isn't a steamship folder—just a picture of a fashion writer's thoughts while viewing the collections of the year's cruise clothes. They're the things you'll be taking with you on that long anticipated holiday cruise for dancing on deck, for dining on shore and for lounging on the beach. You'll wear silk or cotton suits for travelling—cotton that are broken and plaided to look like tweeds. If these suits are light, you'll wear heavy sweaters or blouses with them; if they are dark, you'll wear blouses of brightly printed silk. Of course, there's the ever-useful shirtwaist sports frock, and this season they're smarter when they're short-sleeved or sleeveless.

Selling Shorts

Cruise clothes are built around shorts—shorts for practically everything from breakfast to dinner. You wear them for sports with little cotton boleros on the beach over your bathing suit—and on deck under your skirt. These sets of shirt and shorts suit, by the way, are the biggest and brightest news about cruise clothes—the skirts are all buttoned, so that—whisk! your skirt comes off for deck tennis or shuffleboard, and after the game,—zip! it goes on again for that before-luncheon stroll around deck. These shorts are all full and pleated so that they look like skirts when you're standing still.

Sports Headbands

And another new thing about these cruise clothes are the sports headbands that go with them. You know those crushable headbands that were here with wearing in their hair and pearls this season? Well, they've proved such a charming accessory that we couldn't bear to give them up for daytime wear. So they've made them in all bright colors to match your costumes—and now we can wear them for sports too. If these headbands keep on getting more attractive we suppose we'll be wearing them to bed before long!

Green Winter

Just to prove that fashionably speaking, green things can grow in winter as well as summer, there's been a great demand for green frocks, green blouses and green accessories these last few weeks. Even coats—that stronghold of dark colors—has surrendered to the cause, greens of every shade are most popular among the winter evergreens are—the bright hunter-green, the duller moss green and the new chartreuse, a vivid lemon-green.

Acknowledging Gift Thanks

By MRS. BEECKMAN

Thanks

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

When a person thanks me for a favor or for a gift, what should I say? P.

"You are very welcome." If it was such a pleasure for me to be able to do it," or, for a gift, "I am glad that you like it." Mary That makes me very happy.

Daily Suggestion for Self-Improvement

ONCE one pauses to untangle the uncertainty of whether the negative form of a word should be made with un- or with in-, an argument or two is sure to result. The English prefer insanitary, to our unsanitary. Substantial takes un- and supportable takes in-. Two rules we have, which are fairly safe. Words ending in -ing usually take un- as discrimination and words ending in -able take in-, as, susceptible.

Frocks for the Tango Rhythm

By PRUNELLA WOOD

PARTY frocks that will keep a popular girl going at top speed through the first holidays are a thought worth taking up right now. All of Thanksgiving should not be given to the turkey and its trimmings. There is usually a dance or two that must be reckoned with artfully.

A year or so ago all the artists and helpful hints writers were warning gals that they mustn't don very long gowns when they dressed for dancing. Well, it has come to a point now where those words must be eaten. Goodness only knows how it can be done—the dancing not the word eating, but apparently it's going to be. Maybe the sanguinous dan one an, tangos from the other Amerikans is the answer, maybe feminine cussedness that knows it looks swell will be enough to guide the dancers of any old steppin bars, pass like the girl whose pride keeps her warm when she wears two in a row is drawing room.

A tip in selecting dancing frocks is to examine them in motion not as they appear when one stands and admires them before a pier glass. If you think the skirt may be a weeny bit tight near the hips wiggle a few waltzes to your reflection and see if your seams gape. Remember that a somewhat gaping seam is a big nose of the dark, covered gowns this season, and choose your seams in lighter tints accordingly. Another fine point of wisdom is to slide your feet over the floor, despite anything your fond one may say.

There is a new fitted evening wrap going around that may intrigue any girl. It is a sophisticated perfect sheath, modeled on the Empire, and enough to make one think the days of a gown and crowned with a mantle or a muffled affair are over. It self-matic, it has some dramatic wisp to the sleeve section when edit may be in the behind, and it will launch a new season effectively when it strikes Gotham's evenings after Christmas. Bright coats of velveteen, swagger length, are trimmed or reconciled with one's costume or cape's suit, is another. A wrap is the

This glamorous frock, compounded equally of grown-up sophistication and sub-deb flounces, is an ideal addition to any maiden's wardrobe. It is built for dancing—and coquetting—and its extreme simplicity is both flattering and devastating. A last season girl could add a few glittering bracelets and take it to her own heart.

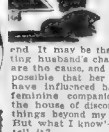
The materials used for the sheathe and its generous troutrous in this gown are a dull crepe, in white or a pastel tone, with matching ruches of that new fine net which shines with a lacquered polish. There is precious little back to the model, though the decollete is long rather than very wide. The skirt flounce goes all around the hem.

—PANDORA TELLS YOU—

DEAR PANDORA:

I feel like a great big sneak and, on the other hand, if I should tell the things I've been keeping to myself it might do more harm than good. Won't you send me in making a decision?

It's this way, Pandora. I'm a secretary to one of the handsomest men in Boston and not only that he's charming, brilliant and irresistible to men and women alike. And he knows it. I wouldn't be a woman if I didn't. Well, anyway, my boss has a wife who's a peach, and in the end. It may be that her fascinating husband's charming ways are the cause, and then again it's possible that her jealousy may have influenced him in seeking feminine companionship outside the home, of discord. These are things beyond my ken, Pandora. But what I know!—and should I tell it?



When the boss' wife comes into the office (and she cares not who hears her), she never fails to make some jealous accusation. I forgot to mention he's one of the town's best divorce lawyers, and when pretty women aren't filing into his office one by one for a conference they're cluttering up his reception-room (only very pretty women dare to divorce their meal-tickets these days).

As I was saying, his wife is forever battering in and accusing him of having dates with lovely women. The boss always denies the charges (I quite agree with that he adores me and my extravagant manner). Last week, however, I let a certain gentleman—that I will not name—kiss me. I was—I don't know what came over me—caught off my guard. It was all so romantic. Moonlight and roses and violins. Well, anyway, the boss saw it. He was furious. He called me a few names and then—I'm afraid—he kissed me. Then he told me to get out and never come back.

Pandora, I'm in a terrible mess. I'm afraid I'm in love with the boss. I'm afraid he's in love with me. I'm afraid his wife will find out. I'm afraid I'll lose my job. I'm afraid I'll never get another job. I'm afraid I'll never get another boss. I'm afraid I'll never get another kiss. I'm afraid I'll never get another anything. I'm afraid I'll never get another afraid. I'm afraid I'll never get another afraid of anything. I'm afraid I'll never get another afraid of anything but you. ROOSEVELT TO FIX U. S. POLICY ON LIQUOR

Washington, Nov. 8 (AP)—President Roosevelt noted the voting of prohibition repeal by the nation with a call today for a special meeting in leaders of governmental affairs to discuss the federal problems in connection with the repeal of the eighteenth amendment by Congress.

He will confer on Friday with representatives of the state legislatures, governors, justices and attorneys-general.

Among the problems confronting the participants will be the question of appropriate standard on whiskey and wine, the repeal duties and a variety of other problems.

Farm organizations also were asked a message relative to such matters as the control of the liquor traffic and the new regulations that would be effected.

Marketing agreements under both distillers and the brewing industry are in operation from a state regulations must be in effect when the agreements become effective in practice.

Dry Ballot Holds Up Liquor Charges

Jackson, Miss., Nov. 8—With six states balloting in what may be the final decision on prohibition repeal, Federal Judge Edwin R. Holmes ordered certain liquor conspiracy cases until the May term of his court.

A large group of defendants awaiting trial was ordered to withdraw or hold for appearance next May. The order virtually cleared the criminal docket.

ELY ACCEPTS "SALOON"

patrons will be required to sit at tables rather than stand at bars.

Gov. Ely's public stand on this phase of the question had been eagerly awaited.

"As much as we may desire to eliminate the saloon," he said, "I do not believe that Massachusetts can eliminate both the saloon and the speakeasy.

"Confronted with this choice, I prefer by all means the saloon. But we shall endeavor to surround it with all possible protection against the worse vices of the old order and call it a tavern.

"The first objective in the return of a legalized liquor traffic is the elimination of the illegal rum trade, speakeasy and bootlegger.

"This is the first and absolutely essential move in restoring a respect for law and the authority of government.

"To this necessary objective, other ends must give way until such time as the morale of our people is brought back to former standards of law and order. Let us have no hypocrisy about it.

"The tavern as defined in the report of your committee is a modified saloon.

"The patron is expected to sit down where he formerly was allowed and in most saloons required, to stand up to drink.

"The reason given for the tavern license is to provide a place where the working man may feel at ease and thereby enjoy the fruits of this anti-prohibition victory.

FOR WORKING MAN

"It's advocates say it is a place for him to go in his working clothes. The proponents of the tavern license say that if such a place is not provided, the man in his working clothes will patronize kitchen bars and speakeasies.

"If the reasons given are sound let us have the tavern.

"May I express my general approval of the legislation proposed by your special committee, but urge upon you that if serious objection develops to the tavern license, the other portions of the bill be enacted separately to-day that they may become law soon enough to permit the licensing authority to handle properly the situation in anticipation of repeal on December 6.

"I suggest that those provisions upon which you can agree be adopted forthwith, leaving the more troublesome matters for more protracted debate.

LOCAL LICENSE PLAN

"For example, you may agree speedily upon the establishment of a state commission having broad general powers with express authority to approve or disapprove all licenses, and to grant club, transportation, wholesale and manufacturers' licenses.

"It also seems reasonable that local licensing boards should grant local licenses in the first instance, subject to approval of the state board. There seems little opposition to the granting of licenses to hotels and restaurants for the sale of alcoholic beverages for consumption on the premises.

"I therefore recommend for your consideration, that these provisions of the law be adopted at once even though other provisions which are eventually necessary are held in abeyance for further consideration by this session, or at the regular session of the Legislature, in order that there may be time for the orderly issuance of permitted licenses prior to the date of the expiration of constitutional prohibition.

OUT OF POLITICS"

"I think I might say that the troublesome question at issue is the question of the saloon. Upon all other matters relating to this subject you may find speedy accord.

"It seems to me that the laws proposed by your committee should prove quite satisfactory.

"There are some possible modifications which you may consider, however, to keep the liquor business out of politics as much as it is possible to do so under a license system. To this end it may be advisable to issue long term licenses at nearly fees, making them practically continuous as long as the governing laws and regulations are observed, but subject to cancellation for breach thereof.

"So, too, the votes on local option questions, which under the report are to be taken at each general election, might well be taken only every four years."

SHOE MEN SEEK INJUNCTION

Brockton, Nov. 8—The Corcoran Shoe Co. of Stoughton, where the Brotherhood of Shoe and Allied Craftsmen called a strike two days ago to win recognition in collective bargaining, today sought an injunction against the new union through its counsel, Edmund J. Campbell.

In a petition, returnable here Friday, he asks that the union be restrained to the use of two pickets. Atty. Lawrence E. Crowley will represent the Brotherhood because its counsel, Frank A. Goodale of Boston, has been made a respondent in the petition. Meanwhile, the firm today closed down its plant.

Girl Student Fights Loss of Chevrons

New Bedford, Nov. 8—The high school student body is up in arms because Eileen McDonald has been stripped of her chevrons.

Eileen is a pretty senior. The chevrons she wore were those of sponsor of the Roosevelt (Jr.) Cheering Corps. And she lost them because she went to a dance.

The dance, it is alleged, was sponsored by a fraternity, and therein lies the trouble, because the school athletes and military sponsors are pledged to have nothing to do with student secret societies.

Eileen claims, however, that the fraternity sponsoring the dance is made up of alumni exclusively, and the student body is backing her up with an appeal to the school board on Friday.

MITTON HEADS TRADE BOARD

Completion of the most successful year in the history of the Retail Trade Board from the standpoint of things achieved and service rendered to members was reported at the meeting of the group's board yesterday. Arch Mahoney elected to succeed Milton A. Mitton, president.

Other officers elected are Edward M. Moss, second vice-president; J. D. Fitzgerald, treasurer; Dana Rogers, assistant treasurer, and R. A. Johnston, secretary.

WELFARE BILLS SUIT LOOMS

Newburyport, Nov. 8—Newburyport may be forced to sue in order to recover approximately $20,000 in back welfare bills, City Councillor Edward B. Hoyt warned here today.

He recalled that the bills were sent out by former City Clerk J. Brian McDonald for two years, and stated it was one of the main problems facing Relief Commissioner Fred W. Knee and who was made head of Newburyport's relief department following the removal of McDonald.

Citing an outstand 92 example he told of a West Newbury woman who drew aid of about $160 [illegible] addition to having $216 paid in rent by the city. The town of West Newbury has never been billed for the City Hall aid.

The councillor tells us the city auditor will have to make a check of the collection from other cities and towns.

Democrats Carry Buffalo by 15,000

Buffalo, N. Y., Nov. 8 (UP)—George J. Zimmerman, Democrat, was elected mayor by a margin of [illegible] votes over Dr. [illegible] Republican candidate.

Democrats also [illegible] their hold on the city council and [illegible] majority.

You Can't Fool Your Feet

A false idea of economy, or a misplaced confidence in a name as close to "Arch Preserver Shoe" as the law will allow, may induce you to try an imitation of the shoe which for years I have featured as the one shoe that would prevent and correct most ordinary foot troubles.

But you cannot fool your foot. Your foot will miss the gentle yet unfailing support that the broad, featherweight steel arch bridge gives. The forward arch will lapse into its old habits of torturing muscles and nerves when it misses the famous metatarsal pad of the genuine Arch Preserver Shoe.

Don't trifle with feet. If they are in good condition don't jeopardize precious foot health. If they are giving you trouble, wear the one shoe that for years has been bringing new ideas of foot comfort to women all around you. Wear the Arch Preserver Shoe—obtainable in Boston only at my two stores.

Milder

..yes I like that word about cigarettes

"When I think of milder cigarettes nowadays, I always think of Chesterfields.

"Because Chesterfields are milder. They've got plenty of taste and aroma to them but they've got mildness too!

"I smoke Chesterfields all day long—when I'm working and when I'm not, and there's no time when a Chesterfield doesn't taste milder and better.

"I'll put in a good word any time for a cigarette like Chesterfields—they're mild and yet they Satisfy."

FOUR PLEAD GUILTY IN WALTHAM ARSON

This Is Life

—By ROBERT E. ROGERS—

IT WAS only to be expected that sooner or later conditions being what they are the old demand to unionize the public school teachers would be revived. By unionize is meant of course affiliation with the American Federation of Labor. Other organizations of teachers, however much they may serve the same purposes are not recognized as unions without that affiliation. The Association of American University Professors commonly called the professors' union does not in this case belong.

The excuse for reviving the idea in these parts is supposed to come from the teachers themselves in cities and towns where there has been drastic retrenchment of the public school budget. There is as far as I can learn, a Federation of Teachers with headquarters in Chicago, which is fairly well organized and active in the West. But here in the East we haven't heard about it. The story seems to be that the Federation was making progress around here up to the time of the Boston police men's strike in 1919. The ill success of that strike and the realization that public opinion would not tolerate any attempt by municipal employes to use familiar union tactics to enforce their demands, put something of a quietus on the movement.

THERE is no doubt that the public school teachers are pawns in the hands of financial and political interests which they have little or no share in controlling. In many places they are forbidden to take part in local activities of any sort in consideration of their rights as citizens. Has so far a strong organization could help them is a question.

Some twenty years ago when I was a reporter in New York, a company union had been formed and active organization was in progress. It seemed so far as I could tell from attending their meetings pretty powerful in the matter of hours of classes and that sort of thing. My impression was that the Chicago teachers also were developed and organized and were getting things pretty much their own way until the crash.

But at present the New York teachers seem no better off than those of any other city. To judge from their complaints they are helpless in the hands of the Board of Education. The number of their unemployed is considerable and increasing. The number of those who have lost their positions with little hope of getting them back, is still greater. Nobody knows how impotent the Chicago teachers have been in their attempts to secure their back pay from the city treasury and to mull on real educational policy. A recent article in the school as organ dates of Chicago teacher shows how the teachers are back a little in relation to the politicians, the interests and the taxpayers.

What practical use our Massachusetts teachers might make of their union, a federation affiliated with the A. F. of L. is open to question. Theoretically the strength of the Federation lies in a solidarity of all organized groups in support of the strike of a single craft. So, a supporting strike keeps on, to have grown fewer as the years pass. Indeed one gets the impression that the crafts on one are more frequently engaged in striking the rest over questions of jurisdiction than in support of one another in the face of a common enemy.

A FEDERATION of teachers properly organized and active could probably exert an important influence at the State House though perhaps no more so than existing organizations. The influence of local unions and the state union in its own city would be materially less. Theoretically a local union might expect help from the other members of the federation throughout the state. Theoretically, it might expect help from all the other unions whose members are engaged in municipal work. Theoretically a general labor strike is possible to back up the teachers.

Practically, everybody knows that the pressure of public opinion against a teachers' strike is the only possible way of effecting their demands—would be so great as to make it impossible. Practically everybody knows that the chances of the craft unions of the municipal employes doing anything effective to back up the teachers are negligible. The average municipal employe is jealous of the teachers. He thinks they have it too easy and are paid too high. Neither happens to be true, but that matters little in a democracy which teaches that intelligent and social distinctions are dangerous and should be wiped out. The fact remains that the teachers can expect little help from their organized fellow workers.

I am of the opinion that a state wide Parent Teachers Association, properly managed, can do more for the teachers than any affiliation with the American Federation of Labor. Labor and Education lack a common denominator.

REALTY EXPERT UNDER FIRE IN BEACON CASE

Duxbury Appraiser Is First Witness as Defense Opens

The hearing to fix damages against directors of Beacon Participations, Inc., for minority stockholders, the latter having won their case before Judge John J. Burns, was relieved today by a bit of comedy.

Atty. Robert T. Bushnell objected to testimony by George W. Ab[illegible] proffered by the defense to estimate the valuation and economic utility of the building at 31 Milk st. owned by the Beacon Building Trust & Beacon Trust Co. [illegible]

Bushnell contended Abbott was not qualified as an expert as to earnings and costs of such kind of office building in the financial district owing to the [illegible] admission that he had never built or had been identified with any type of structure like it.

ACTED FOR BUSHNELL

Defense Attorney Lowell A. Mason's son-in-law, Maurice James C[illegible] had acted as attorney for Bushnell in at least one case, it was brought out. Bushnell also [illegible] the qualifications of Abbott as an expert, stating he is a realtor and not a valuer.

Atty. Bushnell argued that while there might be considerable similarity between the building in question and a private house, [illegible] Abbott's lack of [illegible] ness.

The [illegible] broke when Mayberry asked Abbott to state the [illegible] of the building. After noting the [illegible] exceptions Master Berry allowed the question. Abbott answered it would be $[illegible] years.

Atty. Bushnell argued the evidence [illegible] should be excluded [illegible] Judge Burns.

ESTIMATE REVEALED

Abbott, an agent for Dobbins and former assistant chief engineer for the Boston & Albany, was then asked for his opinion. Atty. Bushnell objected to Edward Spence and other persons' estimates could not offer the proceedings started [illegible].

Abbott estimated the value of the building in 1932 at $1 [illegible] 263,700 and at $1,711,110 during the years and other bank fixtures.

Atty. Thompson made [illegible] which [illegible] of past three years has been that of an expert in court cases and that he had been used by Atty. Mayberry eight or nine times.

Woman Is Sought in Another's Death

Police were searching today for an elderly woman known to them as "Josephine" in connection with the death at City Hospital late yesterday of Mrs. Annie Mahoney, 70, of St. Botolph st., Back Bay. It is claimed the woman pushed Mrs. Mahoney during an argument Oct. 31, and that he received injuries were responsible for her death.

Mysterious

For three consecutive days following the murder of Mrs. Augustine Johnson, mysterious intruders invaded the home of Mrs. Elsie Griffiths of Pigeon Hill, Rockport. The visits are linked with the murder of the widow. Mrs. Griffiths has armed herself with a shotgun and is staying close to home to repel invaders. She is standing near her icebox where the invaders have confined their search for some unknown object. (Boston American photo.)

DEERY PLEADS NOT GUILTY

John A. Deery jailed president of the closed Salem Trust Co. was taken from Salem jail to federal court in Boston today under guard and arraigned on an indictment relating to the collapse of the Federal National Bank of Boston.

Deery pleaded not guilty in a loud voice to aiding Director Daniel C. Mullaney of the Federal National Bank in the alleged misapplication of $131,000.

Bail of $18,000 was urged by Irving G. McCann, special assistant U. S. Attorney-General, and $10,000 by Deery's counsel James W. Sullivan of Lynn. Judge Hugh D. McLellan said he would not set bail at this time.

Deery, who was moved here on habeas corpus proceedings, was taken back to Salem jail.

'KEENO'S' DEATH FAILS TO HALT COURT ACTION

Court Demands Proof of Slaying in Club Chalet

"John P. Keenan, John P. Keenan—John P. Keenan—come into court and answer to this complaint or your default will be recorded."

The red nose of the law unwound itself as [illegible] Keenan Club Chalet shouted [illegible] lay in death today.

The court room's demand for Keenan's presence in municipal court on a liquor charge was not only the symbol of the law's prolonged failure to keep the many times-arrested keenan [illegible].

It was also the death knell of the chartered club [illegible] of speakeasies which police have professed a fear of raiding.

Keenan's death has shown the Club Chalet not as a place that never was disturbed at all. And the police excuse that state police [illegible] these clubs, went up in smoke.

WANTS DEATH PROOF

As a funeral mass for Keenan was being arranged for Friday at 9 a.m. at St. Margaret [illegible] the Special Officer Harold Yates was explaining to Judge Zottoli that Keenan could not appear in court because he was dead.

"Have you a death certificate?" asked the court.

"No, your honor," said Yates. "Then I shall default the defendant until the certificate is produced," said Judge Zottoli—that being the law.

And so Keenan remained alive on the records and [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

Lie Champ

It was last night out on Huntington ave. The liquor card counter man stuck me hard.

"Sorry, buddy," he said, "but we can't give no handouts. The boss ain't here."

"I know he ain't." The broke and hungry would-be customer was wide and innocent of eye. "I met him just now, right down the street, and he said to tell you okay for ten bits worth of chow."

That won for me. The free meal was served. Double quantities too, of everything.

"Thanks, fellah. You're regular." the non-paying guest grinned appreciatively. "I gotta admit now I told you a lie. I didn't see the boss at all."

The counterman fixed another cup of coffee and passed it over.

"It's all right, Jack," he said, "forget it. I happen to be the boss myself."

Love Language

He was a new blonde but some hard case, I'll say. And the talk I overheard him use to her showed a side to the gentle sex I never suspected was in them.

"Now listen, you big stiff, let's get this straight. I'm not going to be pushed around by you or anybody else. Do you understand me? I'm going to be treated right or I'm going to leave you flat. Is that clear?"

Well, I don't like the sex of the female, but I'll admit that's the right attitude to take with the fairer sex of the species. Of course we suppress that stuff under normal conditions, but when the powers of repression

"Now, no-good sourpuss," stormed the director in charge of the picture, "I'm afraid you've got some passion in this picture. I'd tend to yourself it's real, for heaven's sake. Pretend to yourself that Miss Griffith is the girl you're crazy about in Sweden. Pretend you're pleading with her a good plenty with your sweetie. Be natural. Stop acting. Be a man, not a taller's dummy. Pretend you're home in your fiancee's parlor."

Pro Football Rushes to Rescue the Cavanaughs ↕ While College Football Teeters on the Sidelines

By AUSTEN LAKE

It would seem that college football is pretty frugal, if not downright niggardly, when it comes to skinning any leaves off its bankroll for divers charitable works, like that of aiding the family of the late Major Cavanaugh. The colleges where Cavanaugh once coached, including Holy Cross, Dartmouth, Boston College, Fordham and various applejack institutions, are making motions of blissful ignorance in this moment of the family's distress, like a supper club-gathering about to be served with the dinner check. So it remains for a couple of soulless corporations like the Boston Redskins and the New York Giants to slice a hunk from their living flesh and offer it as a sacrifice at the Polo Grounds next Sunday.

The colleges, of course, dodge behind the fact that they paid Cavanaugh liberal salaries during his lifetime and therefore their moral obligation has ceased. Also that the game of football and all monies derived belong collectively to the students and may not be diverted. Also that, the times being what they are and the expense of supporting ten or more dependent sports, it is a cheek-to-cheek romp with the wolf. Also that it is a dangerous precedent. And a lot of other alsos as long as your arm.

The colleges mistakenly assume that they hire a football coach with the same impersonal approach that a biscuit factory employs a foreman or a superintendent, and that their commercial liability cease when the coach leaves, often to accept a larger salary from a more ambitious institution. This is pure chop-logic. The Board of Overseers the graduate manager, or in some cases the Chamber of Commerce, whichever does the hiring, fails to understand that the nature of the job causes a coach to weave himself into the sentimental fabric of the college to become part of its folklore.

Coaching Type That Develops Football Mythology

This is particularly true of a piquant, hell-roaring personality like Cavanaugh's was. Since the student players who whimpered privately under his harsh lash and suffered silently from his bur-rocane methods, are always the ones who in later life, when their youthful flats and hollows have turned to middle-aged bulges and swells, reflect glowingly on their old fortitudes and gloat on their capacity for punishment.

It is human nature that a stern drillmaster, with a blend of crude justice, will gather more affection from his disciples than the mild, sweet mannered tutor who blesses his pupils and tries to ease their distress. Human memory for old sufferings is mercifully brief, which is why today I still hear many of Cav's former players mention him with a loving oath while telling how he mangled their muscles and tortured their souls in two hour scrimmages and double doses with the tackling dummy. 'The old bastard . . .' they will begin in a voice like a prayer.

I never served in Cav's command during the war, but I have learned enough about the relation of officers to their soldiers to know that the men he stood at attention in the driving rain and up to their ankles in Aisne mud or those that he marched at doubletime, dinnerless, under a blistering French sun, breathed maledictions on his grim, knobbed head and yet would drive his caissons through a box-barrage and into the shambles of the Reims wire.

Am I clear? For I mean that Cav belongs to the football saga, not alone of each college where he coached, but to the solar legend of the game itself, just as, before him, Walter Camp and Knute Rockne became football immortals at the moment of their passing. I recall that every college in the land contributed something toward the building of that handsome Walter Camp Gate that stands before the entrance of the Yale Bowl. And every college subscribed to that elaborate Rockne Field House at South Bend, which from the architect's drawing appears not so much an athletic plant as it does a national memorial. But those were acts of sentiment and not charity.

Professional Sport Bears Charity's Load

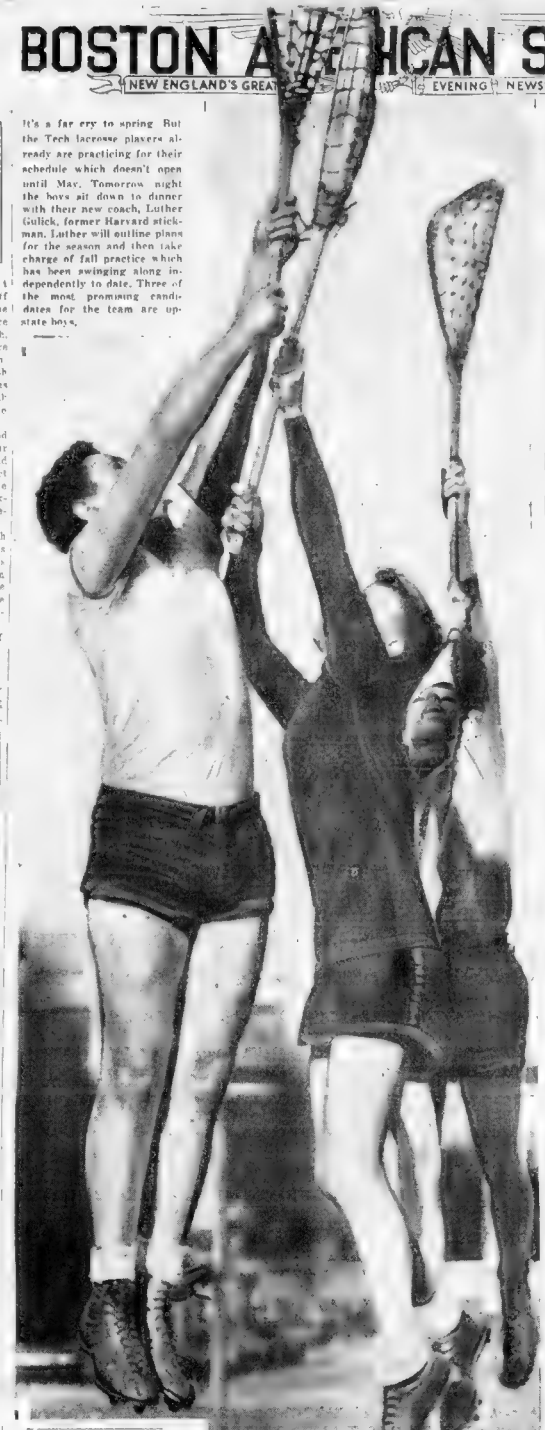
I do not know whether Camp and Rockne, in their several times, were any more the fathers of college football than Cavanaugh. For I remember that the Major published one of those earlier, primitive volumes on the technical end of the game which pioneered in a field that Rockne later developed and dominated. It was a matter of much bitterness to Cav that his own reputation as a football inventor was fairly eclipsed by Rockne's although many of the gadgets that Knute employed to make Notre Dame a byword wherever football was mentioned, might have been found in that early, primitive Cavanaugh volume.

And I'll wager, at the moment, that Cav and Knute are not plucking the strings of any golden harps up yonder, but are cramped on a rose-colored, fleecy cloud, scribbling little formations on the hems of their white gowns and quibbling over the proper defense against the tackle-dive.

Perhaps it is because college football has always received its supply of publicity in the daily press for so long and in such plenty that it has come to view big business football and its profits as sacrosanct to itself. On the other hand professional football, being still in the apprentice stage is humble and therefore an open mark for the charity finger man. For I notice when there is an alms-giving enterprise to promote that the gun sights are always set on the pros of all sports.

Last Spring when Steve McPherson offered to give ten per cent of his wrestling show to the needy family of Jimmy Henigan, the marathoner, within a few hours after he made the announcement the bank which owned and rented the house where the Henigans lived called up to impound the money against back rent. Which is incidental to the subject, but a study in social science.

Sunday at the Polo Grounds the Redskins and the Giants, the players and owners of which knew Cavanaugh only by hearsay, are giving forty per cent of a game that would have taken the teams, as the boys say, off the season's "nut." It means security for the amateur Cavanaughs and a salute of twenty-one guns to the professional Redskins and Giants.



It's a far cry to spring. But the Tech lacrosse players already are practicing for their schedule which doesn't open until May. Tomorrow night the boys sit down to dinner with their new coach, Luther Gulick, former Harvard stickman. Luther will outline plans for the season and then take charge of fall practice which has been swinging along independently to date. Three of the most promising candidates for the team are upstate boys.

TUFTS DRIVES TO MAINTAIN SEVEN-YEAR STREAK OVER B. U.

MANLEYMEN AT FULL STRENGTH FOR BATTLE

By WALTER KILEY

Two main objectives serve as incentive for greater efforts on the part of the Jumbos of Tufts College as they prepare for Saturday's game with Boston University. In the first place they are anxious to continue their reign of supremacy over the Terriers which has been going on now since 1926, and secondly they are hoping to start a new Tufts Oval winning streak, their old record of never having lost a home game since 1926, having been rudely shattered in surrendering a hi-ho by Williams two weeks ago.

In fact the last time that Tufts lost at the Oval Boston University was the team that turned the trick, winning 16-7. Since that time and up to the W. I. game, Tufts has always enjoyed mastered home games success.

ANCIENT RIVALRY

Tufts holds a decided edge in the series with 11 to the Medford team having won nine of 13 games played. The series which rates as one of the oldest in college gridiron history having started with an 18-6 victory for Tufts back in 1894.

During the 1931-1926 period, the Terriers enjoyed their most winning period. Those were the days of Mickey Cochrane, possibly the best years in B. U. record books.

Since 1927, the Terriers have been held to one lone touchdown, that one coming as the two teams battled to a 0-0 tie last fall.

It seems that the Medford team has some sort of a jinx over the Intowners. Two years ago, B. U. cleanly outplayed Tufts only to lose 6-5 and in 1932, a placement kick by Capt. Sammy Clayman hit the cross bar and tumbled over for the lone point.

In view of the fact that Saturday's game is the finale to the Boston University season, the first year of varsity competition under Dr. John M. Harmon as head coach, the Terriers are expected to throw the works at Tufts, who have no more hard games to face in Bowdoin and Massachusetts State.

JUMBOS AT TOP

However, Tufts will be close to its full strength for the first time since the opening game of the season. The Jumbos are in the pink of condition and ready to go the limit.

Johnny Grinkel is due to report back for practice today after a day or two at home in bed with a severe cold.

Manley is ready to start his charges through their paces this afternoon in preparation for the Terrier game. Tufts has a special Monday practice session for the benefit of those players who failed to get into the game last Saturday.

Manley has been experimenting with Johnny Tufts as quarterback, Billy Whelton, regular signal caller, is definitely out of the game which means that Wilbur Storer will have first call at the position, with Chief Nagy as replacement and Tufts ready to step into the breach if the emergency arises.

Tufts' running attack, which was outplayed by the Williams Purple in the Jumbos were unable to work effectively this past week.

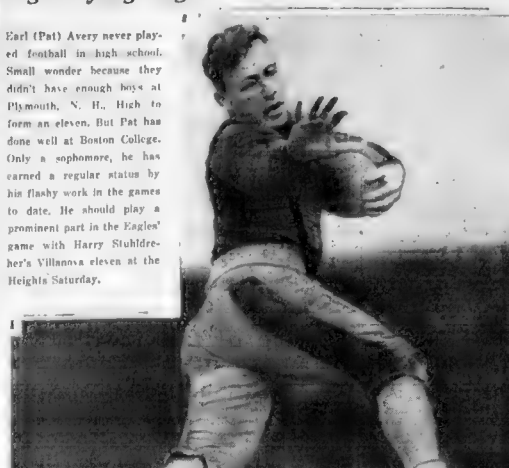
High Flying Eagle -:- Meet Pat Avery

Earl (Pat) Avery never played football in high school. Small wonder because they didn't have enough boys at Plymouth, N. H., High to form an eleven. But Pat has done well at Boston College. Only a sophomore, he has earned a regular status by his flashy work in the games to date. He should play a prominent part in the Eagles' game with Harry Stuhldreher's Villanova eleven at the Heights Saturday.



Passes, Punts and Fumbles

By BILL GRIMES

Now that Notre Dame has lost to Navy, Pitt and Carnegie Tech, not to mention the tie with Kansas University, there should not be a great deal of pressure on the "Irish" when they tackle Purdue on Saturday. Despite the setbacks, Notre Dame is very much underrated and as liable to click at any time and that time may be this week.

Although it is refraining from any mention of the goings-on at Cambridge, Harvard is bearing down for Army. The squad is getting a thorough schooling against Army plays and every effort is being resorted to that will convince the players that the 1932 slaughter was nothing more or less than a series of tough breaks.

Lieut. Park Echols, who succeeded Capt. Walter Wells as head of the Army publicity department, will arrive tomorrow night. He will establish headquarters at the University Club, from where all information concerning the football squad will emit.

Harvard has taken on a new lease of life since its unexpected victory over Tufts and is now regarded as a threat to win the Little Three title especially in view of the fact that Wesleyan tied Amherst the defending champion.

Lieut. Coach Joe McKenney is busily building a defense which, he hopes, will stop "Whitey" Randour, the star of Harry Stuhldreher's Villanova aggregation. And Coach McKenney will not overlook Bill "Tobey" Cavanaugh, the Norwood boy, who is quarterbacking the Mainliners.

Johnny Philips, Bill Morton and Josh Davis have been scouting Princeton for Dartmouth all season and they are now in Hanover trying to whip the scrubs into some semblance of a Tiger outfit. It is nothing to scout Princeton but it is impossible to get any scrubs to act like Garry LeVan, "Kats" Kaline or "Pepper" Constable, for if they had the ability they would be members of the first varsity.

Up around Hanover there is a feeling that the Big Green is going to surprise the boys next Saturday at Princeton. At least, they will enter the game in a better mental condition than that which accompanied them into the Yale Bowl. But, Princeton is too powerful and too resurgent for the Indians of the North.

Mat Campbell, manager of the Belmont Spring County Club, has everything in readiness for the arrival and quartering of the West Point football squad. Apparently, the Army has been thoroughly satisfied with its treatment and the service at Belmont Spring, for it is returning for its fifth visit to the House of Campbell.

After the Brown-Syracuse game in Providence the alumni of the S. A. T. C. days will gather at the Hotel Narragansett for a get-together dinner, at which Head Coach "Vic" Hanson will make a short address to the old boys, the length of his dissertation depending upon the outcome of the game.

If Notre Dame pops up with a victory over Purdue this weekend, with big Ed Krause as acting captain, there will be opinions advanced that the Ramblers would have been more successful had they elected the giant tackle as leader instead of adopting the system of appointing a captain for each game.

English Rider Breaks Record

Liverpool, Eng., Nov. 8 (INS)—Riding his 247th winner of the year today at Aintree, Jockey Gordon Richards, 28-year-old riding sensation of the British turf, surpassed by one the record of Fred Archer, set in 1885.

Richards, son of a miner who wanted him to be a clerk, will earn close to $300,000 this year through his uncanny horsemanship, it is said.

TERRIERS SET FOR JUMBOS

A feeling of confidence pervades Nickerson Field, Westerly, as Boston University puts on the finishing touches for its final game of the season against Tufts on Saturday.

The Terriers are well rested, Coach Harmon having saved most of his regulars for Saturday in the game with the Jumbos.

Johnny Grinkel is due to report back for practice today after a day or two at home in bed with a severe cold.

Manley is ready to start his charges through their paces this afternoon in preparation for the Terrier game. Tufts has a special Monday practice session for the benefit of those players who failed to get into the game last Saturday.

Manley has been experimenting with Johnny Tufts as quarterback, Billy Whelton, regular signal caller, is definitely out of the game which means that Wilbur Storer will have first call at the position, with Chief Nagy as replacement and Tufts ready to step into the breach if the emergency arises.

STONEHAM HIGH HITS TOP GRID STRIDE AFTER SLOW START

TEAM DEPENDS ON 'PAY TAGS' FOR REVENUE

By BILL CONNELL

An unexpected victory after a stretch of losing football has turned [illegible] was hoping for the day when the season could be forgotten, now is clamoring for Coach Howard Gordon to arrange a game for the [illegible] quest of Maynard high accomplish. The victory was the first of the season. Maynard had played Waltham fre example, and held it to a small score. Stoneham fans hoped for the best but expected little.

Thus when Stoneham edged Maynard and completely bottled up brilliant Halfback Johnny O'Leary in the process the win electrified Stoneham folk.

HAD FOUR VETS

There was a good reason for Stoneham's slow start. Only four letter men were here. Many of the candidates were sophomores, were green because Stoneham has no football in the junior high school system.

The boys were learning, however, and though victories were missing, those of the camp were very close. Against Maynard the eleven for the first time hit its best pace.

The first blow to this Stoneham team was in the loss of Captain-elect Wayne Bingham, excellent wing who failed to return to school. Soon the team selected an ace leader, right tackle Stan Brooks, a tall 185-pounder who is a tackle on offense, but roves back of the line of defense.

Robert King, light, but a fine defensive wing and good blocker, wins the third berth. Excellent Scully, a son of School Committeeman Scully, who formerly was a noted athlete, takes the left tackle spot.

Leo Lashakian, 160, snot, but very alert, makes a good left guard. Earle Gould has center's duties. A right guard, who moves to tackle on defense, is found in rangy Georgt Lufkin.

Brooks at right tackle and Sophomore George Downes, rugged little 146-pounder, complete the first string line. John Eufugian has been at right end much of the time, splitting the duties with Downes.

Peter Savello, 165, the best all around athlete of the school, makes a fine quarterback. He is a hard running carrier, southpaw passer, and punter.

Fullback Roland McKinnon, soph, weighs 160 and passes, kicks and carries. Will be a great school back in another year, John Bowers, 135, but very fast, holds the left halfback spot. Right half is divided among four boys, Harry Russell and Leon Saunders, juniors and seniors Doug Connor and Karl Frick.

That first group includes 15 boys, eight of whom are back next fall. Many sophomores are on the squad. The future is bright.

Some of the better subs include Robert Stinson and Michael Mustone, ends; Ted Arnold and Winslow Blanchard, tackles; Don Casey 175, (an alternate for Lufkin on the varsity), Ed Theroux, Leo Murphy, Harold Pickens and James McDonough, guards; Joe Wainright, Paul Junkins and Walter Reynolds, centers.

Frank Sirocco, Walter Savello (Pete's br Ber) quarterbacks; George Posiello and William Burns, who is the fastest runner on the squad, halfbacks; Elliott Atherton, Carl Tolman and Ed Boudreau, guards; William Thiesfeldt, Robert Carter and Ellis Roberts, ends; David Dewhurst, back, are other subs.

PAY AS YOU PLEASE

The team has no enclosed field, so plays on the Pomworth at grounds and sells tags to spectators. Fortunately the Stoneham fans are sportsmen, many purchasing tags at every home game. An athletic night at the theater and a winter carnival have provided additional revenue to keep the squad well equipped.

This year the carnival may be dropped, and two plays during the Winter substituted.

Finance aside, the squad's big goal now is a victory over traditional rival, Reading when that team invades Stoneham on Saturday. Then come Marlboro, then the open date which the boys want filled, and the windup with Methuen at Stoneham on Thanksgiving.

If the boys do well this week, Coach Gordon will try to fill the open Saturday. With that incentive the boys will be out there trying for their second straight win, this weekend.

Mitey Mite Plays With Stoneham

Frank Geremonte, who comes from a family of noted athletes, has the distinction of being one of the smallest school gridmen of the state as he tries for a halfback berth at Stoneham high. Frank weighs between 85 and 90 pounds! He's a sophomore, and hopes to eat himself into a regular berth in a year or two.

Here are Stoneham's football warriors, and their lineup looks very much like a bad storm cloud to Reading, which visits Stoneham on Saturday. After a slow start the inexperienced Stoneham players gained enough momentum to upset a heavily favored Maynard eleven last week. Now the boys plan a whirlwind finish. To cap the season with success.

MR. BOSTON

By JACK CONWAY

I FOUND MAX WAXMAN, manager of Vince Dundee, talking with Matchmaker Billy Arms and Johnny Buckley at the Boston Garden. Waxman made a special trip from Baltimore to Boston to discuss the possibilities of a world's middleweight championship tussle between Dundee and Andy Callahan, the "Irish Hand Grenade," from Lawrence.

"I have offers for Dundee from all parts of the world," said Waxman. Jeff Dickson is particularly anxious to show Dundee in Paris, while Jimmy Johnston would like to pit him against Young Terry in the New York Garden.

"I intend to have Dundee make his first title defense in Boston," said Waxman. "He won the title here, and owes the local Garden a break."

Mr. Boston

"How about matching Dundee with Callahan?" pressed Ames.

"I would like to take the match," replied Waxman. "It would be a good fight, and should draw a large gate.

"Callahan would give Dundee a real fight," insisted Buckley. "He licked Brouillard more decisively than did Dundee. I'll also agree to give Dundee a return bout in the event Callahan lifts the title."

"I'll talk the match over with Dundee," said Waxman, "and get Ames on the long distant telephone and give him our decision.

"They have been tossing banquets to Dundee in Baltimore and Newark since he won the championship. He has been wined and dined like a king.

"I am a bit used to this championship setting as I managed Kid Williams when he was bantamweight champion, and Joe Dundee when he was welterweight boss, but I must admit the admirers of Vince have set up new records for entertainments."

Hurt by Brouillard Punch

I ASKED Waxman if Dundee was in danger at any time during his mill with Brouillard.

"Brouillard hurt Vince with one of his right hooks to the body," replied Waxman. "Then Vince proved what a smart fighter he is. After the punch landed, Brouillard rushed to close quarters. Vince grabbed him and intentionally backed through the ropes. He pulled Lou through the ropes with him.

"This figured this delay would give him an opportunity to recover from the effects of the punch. The crowd thought Brouillard had pushed Vince through the ropes, and booed the Worcester battler.

"There has been so much talk about Dundee's age I secured his baptismal certificate. It shows he is 25 years old."

Fought Winning Battle

WAXMAN SAID Joe Dundee, Vince's brother, was in charge of the plan of battle.

"Vince fought a winning fight," said Waxman. "Joe refused to permit him to take unnecessary chances. I thought that if Vince had opened up and gambled a bit with his right that he might have knocked Brouillard out.

"Dundee has been winning many of his fights by knockouts. There is a colored middleweight in Pittsburgh by the name of Frankie Genaro. He is a better fighter than Brouillard, Yarosz or Terry, and yet Dundee knocked him out in six rounds. Goosby ha' won 89 bouts in a row before he met Vince."

HUSKY FINALE WITH ARNOLD

For two solid weeks, Coach Al McCoy has been impressing on his Northeastern squad the value of finishing the second half of a game as strongly as it started the first half.

Coach's repetition should have its reward in the Huskies running up a lead in the early part of the game with Arnold on Saturday.

In every one of the four games played this fall at Huntington Field, the Huskies have run up an opening halt lead, only to go into a state of lethargy in the second frame which gave every indication of laying down on the job.

Northeastern is figuring on a win on Saturday. This would give the Huskies a fine first year record, it would mean two victories, a pair of defeats and one tie, not bad for the first year of varsity competition.

As Arnold is rated strong defensively, especially when it has the ball within the opponents in yard line, McCoy has been grooming his squad on plays which are most likely to carry over for the touchdown. Recent scrimage sessions have seen fine ball carrying on the part of Buell, Allen, Flimmer, Henry Purdon and Allan Hakanson, all of whom will get plenty of opportunity to display their finest wares on Saturday.

Fordham Is 2-1 Choice Over N. Y. U.

New York, Nov. 8—On its past performances, Fordham today was installed a 2 to 1 favorite to trim New York University, 7 to 0, in their annual battle Saturday. Coach Jim Crowley reported his Fordhamites in remarkably fine condition after their bruising battle with St. Mary's, N. Y. U. was to spend the afternoon concentrating on defense against the Maroons' slashing attack.

Archibald floored Bradley for a short count in the fifth and four times in the seventh before a left hook ended the bout.

B.C. RUNNERS IN HANDICAP MEET

In order to break the monotony of routine running sessions, Jack Ryder, Boston College track coach, will hold a fall handicap meet at University Heights tomorrow afternoon. More than 75 boys are expected to compete.

He is in high hopes of discovering new talent which may blossom out in varsity competition at a later date.

On Friday afternoon track practice will be called off, as the Eagle harriers are racing Army over the new Boston College course which winds its way down Beacon st. to Cleveland circle, back around the twin reservoirs at Chestnut Hill and then up the hill to the college and down onto the cinder track where it finishes.

Tomorrow's event will be sort of a preliminary to the annual interclass meet which is the first major event on Ryder's winter program. This is slated for Monday and Tuesday, Nov. 20 and 21st.

The events are a handicap 120-yard dash, with John McManus, N. E. 200-yard champion, as scratch man; 440-yard handicap, with William Paras, member of last year's two-mile relay team, and Donald Shore the only freshman from Exeter as scratch starter.

Dusty Rhodes, ace miler from scratch in the 880-yard event, conceding liberal handicaps up to 75 yards. Neil Holland will give away yards to all in the handicap pole vault.

Gordon Connor and William Hayes are entered from scratch in the high jump.

In addition there will be two hurdles events, both run without benefit of handicaps, a 70-yard high hurdles and 120-yard low. Ryder tentatively running them at odd distances.

BAER ON HUNT FOR CARNERA

San Francisco, Nov. 8 (INS)—Max Baer contemplates going to Italy and, in person, hurling a defi at champion Primo Carnera. Or maybe he'll just have a good time.

That was how uncertain life was here today for the California heavyweight as he greeted traffic judges, night club proprietors, a pretty girl or so and prepared to go to court in Sacramento with his latest manager, Arndt Hoffman, over claims advanced by a former manager, Hamilton Lorimer.

"Jack Dempsey is calling in a day or two," said Hoffman, "and will discuss plans for the three of us to make a world tour. We can get good fights in Sweden and South America and drop in on Carnera and defy him right to his face and in his own front yard. Maybe we'll fight him in Italy."

But, on second thought, the manager and fighter considered the Primo again. Both think Baer is tops as an actor.

"Is he good!" repeated Hoffman. "Barrymore and Gable haven't got a thing on him. We've got several good offers and may take them up and forget fighting if Max's picture gets over big."

"Sure, I like to act," cut in modest Max. "I'm really a knockout artist in the ring or on the screen. What I do all depends on where the most money is."

The big fighter's keeping in condition by chopping wood occasionally, playing golf twice a week and playing the night clubs in between.

He had just come from South San Francisco, where he paid $25 to a traffic court for going around 65 miles an hour.

Ring Championships Can't Pay the Postage

By FRANK G MENKE

New York, Nov. 8—Smart people no longer are raising their sons to be gladiators in the prize rings.

They don't want their offsprings to starve to death.

The once lucrative profession now yields hardly enough money to pay expenses.

And that means in bouts where champions are concerned.

Primo Carnera, the world's champion, tussled with Paolino in Rome and the gate was less than $75,000.

Sure. It was Rome where they aren't supposed to be so hot and bothered about the boxing blokes. But there's no doubt that this is one of the biggest purlieus in the world, that the event was a social as well as a sporting event, and that it also was partially for charity.

And the star of the show was Italy's own athletic idol.

Paolino received a few thousand dollars. Carnera nothing. He did it for Benito Mussolini and sweet charity.

WITNESS OUR LOU

Up in Boston a middleweight champion met a rival with the title at stake. The receipts were less than $14,000. The champion received around $5000 and lost his crown, which recalls the olden, golden days when a non-titular affair with a champion in one corner was good for at least $25,000 for the champ's end.

A light heavyweight champion ran an errand in Madison square in the New York arena, where for years of the past have played to houses of better than $30,000. This one drew less than $15,000 into the till.

Not so long ago a welterweight king met a formidable foeman in California. An open air show. Popular prices. The taing was ballyhooed to the mountain tops. And the receipts were so small that they did not pay the guarantee made to the champion.

In the prosperous days, the champions scaled down from $1-000,000 in some busy seasons to $125,000 and $150,000—if they wanted to work steadily at their tasks. Even the ordinary mitt flippers could pick up between $30,000 and $50,000 whenever they wanted to work steadily at their trades.

FEW OVER $25,000

Excepting the heavies, the champions of 1933 who made as much as $25,000 gross can be counted on half a hand. And they had to cut up that $25,000 in many parts; so much for expenses, so much for the manager, so much for income tax and so on. Any little holder who actually had for himself 20 per cent of what he earned was fortunate to an extreme.

And the runners up—well, these fellows had to be content with from $2500 up to $7,000 gross, or cigaret money at most.

Here are the good old days of pie down.

Gone is the era of bigger earnings.

The fight game has gone back 30 or 35 years in importance. When the fellow who earned a scant living with his fists was lucky indeed. And it won't improve for many, many seasons.

Nation-Wide Protest on Football Rules

By DICK HYLAND

New York, Nov. 8—There has been much smoke of late having to do with proposed changes in the rules governing American intercollegiate football. And where there is so much smoke there must be some fire, some necessity for the changes so generally advocated.

Lou Little, Columbia's coach and a man not given to superfluous words, cracks down with the statement that the rule forbidding the defensive team to run with a fumbled ball is strictly the bunk and should be removed from the book.

Coaches, students of the game of football from one end of the country to the other pop up with official comments pro and con anent the fumble rule, the "dead ball" rule and a flock of other rules. But no one has taken the trouble to explain just why he wanted the rules changed.

TOUGH TO SCORE

"Something," says Pop Warner, "has got to be done to the rules of American football. The defense has caught up with and passed the offense. It's getting tougher to score all the time."

There was the reason for all the proposed changes! There was the thing that was sticking in the craw of coaches. That was why something should be done to the rules! Football teams could not score!

My first reaction to Warner's remark was, "rubbish." I remembered Southern California, Michigan, Army, Fordham, Alabama, and other ball clubs running up big scores. And then I blinked. They did not run up big scores when they played each other! Or played other teams in their class! These contests were being decided by one touchdown or were scoreless ties. Stanford and Northwestern, Southern California and Oregon State, Alabama and Vanderbilt, Notre Dame and Colgate, Wisconsin and Chicago—the list of scoreless ties this year seemed endless.

Alabama and Fordham finished 2-0. Northwestern has played four games this year without scoring and in two of these the other team couldn't score either! Notre Dame, of all teams, has been unable to score in four out of five games this year. Phew! This peeking at the records was beginning to mean something. These were no push-over ball clubs. They were the best in the country. And if they could not score who could?

HALF GAMES SCORELESS

Last Sunday a New York newspaper listed 187 of the games played the day before. In 118 of these one or both teams were held scoreless! Two out of every three games saw one or both clubs unable to make a single point!

What does this mean? To the fan? To the players?

To the latter it means the exultant thrill of driving across a goal line denied him. It means he trains for weeks, denies himself petty pleasures, sweats himself into shape on a blazing practice field—and breaks his heart against a stone wall in Saturday's game. Held scoreless is important in working. Was he? Or were the odds and the cards—and the rules of football—all against him?

To the fan it means deadly dull uninteresting games. Whereas even if his pet team has been beaten, but scored a few times itself he can exit with at least something to talk about. And he had a few happy moments of real action.

What's the answer? What effect did a too strong defense have upon baseball and what was done about it? What effect will a too strong defense have upon football? And what can be done about it?

Amherst Frosh Toys With Varsity

Amherst, Mass., Nov. 8 (INS)—Amherst was convinced today that one of the surprises of the 1934 football season will be Amherst. This conclusion was reached after the unbeaten frosh team had again toyed with the varsity. The veterans could do nothing with the yearlings

BEAVER SQUASH COACH BUSY

Of the Technology coaches, Jack Summers, three national professional squash champion, is probably the busiest.

Summers has four teams to prepare, the Beaver varsity, jayvees, freshman and a team composed of graduate students and professors, with a total turnout of nearly 125 candidates, with 60 of these striving for positions on the varsity and jayvee teams.

Led by Capt. David Ingalls of Kansas, who also captained the Beavers last year, the varsity will compete in the Intercity League, composed of B. A. A., Harvard Club Harvard University, Union Boat Club and Tennis and Racquet Club. In addition, the Cardinal and Gray squash team meets Trinity, Yale, Princeton, Harvard and Pennsylvania in intercollegiate contests.

Lucas, star of last year's team, has been lost through graduation, and Coach Summers is working with his four veterans, Wood, Ingalls, Eder and a sophomore, Newman, who showed up well for the freshman team last year. Hunt also is expected to be on the team.

The section of the freshman team, always a bothersome matter in the past, has apparently been solved by rendering a handicap tournament, in which the men shifting to the rear must make their in the list of competitors. The final top seven men will constitute the freshmen team.

Summers makes no prediction and yet with the seven courts thus practically every hour of the day with men working out under supervision a strong team is bound to develop.

School Slants

By BILL CONNELL

One of the unbeaten teams of the season which has missed the headlines is the Rivers School junior eleven. Playing under the private school system of rating teams by age weight and height Rivers juniors have beaten teams from Belmont Hill Fessenden, Roxbury Latin and Country Day [illegible]

The team's backfield includes quarterback Walter Muther, Capt. Richard Keene, Melvin Gordon and Bartlett Harvey. The four are iron men, playing without relief. They have to be rugged with only 15 boys on the squad.

Tom Leydon, athletics director at Rivers School coaches the juniors who take their football seriously, as benefits champion gridmen.

Benny Ginsberg of the Baron to you, will try to prove he is something else besides a Jewish heavyweight wrestling champion when he clashes with Harry Landin, German grappler, in a finish bout, best two falls out of three, at an Alex MacLean show at the Arena tonight.

Ginsberg has smashed his way to the front in the grappling game. This will be his first main bout, and he is anxious to go over big in fast company.

When Ginsberg first came here he did considerable clowning. But he kept winning his bouts. It was quite evident that the fellow could wrestle as well as clown.

Lundin is former wrestling champion at Cornell. He is a finished wrestler, and says he will add Ginsberg to his list of victims tonight. The Baron has been installed a 5 to 4 favorite, and says he will not turn down those persons who have backed him with heavy mets.

Jim Wallis, who used to do his stuff for Holy Cross, will collide with Al Mercier of Terrace in the semi-final. This bout will be decided by one fall. There will not be many time limit.

Bob Russell of Newport will collide with George Linnehan of Wayland in a special bout with a 30 minute limit. Another special bout will find Axel Anderson of this city in action against Gene LaDoux of Quebec.

"You've Elected a Great Man Mayor"—His Son

"And now, fellow citizens, I want you to take a look at a young Mansfield."

So spoke the next mayor of Boston, Frederick W. Mansfield, this morning as he pushed forward to the railing of Parkman Bandstand on Boston Common a good-looking, sandy-haired youth, his face wreathed in smiles.

Walter Mansfield, son of the mayor-elect, stood before the milling crowd. His voice broke several times as he tried to make his address. The youth, a junior at the Harvard Law School, was so emotionally overcome with joy, he could hardly speak.

But finally words came forth.

He was deliriously happy. His father had won! He, a young lad, forgot valiantly for his father and victory!

"I can't make a speech," he began. "You don't want to hear me talk. But I want to tell you supporters that you have placed your confidence in one of the finest men in the world—my father."

Just a short while before, young Mansfield, together with Mrs. Mansfield, had accompanied his father to the Hotel Bradford, where, over Station WRZ, they sent out their thanks over the air.

The mayor-elect spoke and then his son spoke.

"I had a prepared speech, my friends," the youth said, "It was a grand speech. But I am so happy I can't give it now. I want to tell you that you have placed your faith and confidence in the greatest and grandest man in the world—my dad."

Young Mansfield is a handsome lad, gentlemanly, courteous, gracious.

Melvin Train, of Wilmington, Delaware, has broken his 11 years of voluntary silence, by saying—"Most people talk too much."

Apparently he is a married man. It's barely possible that this is the first time he has had a chance to get a word in edgewise.

Anyway, it would be nothing short of an inspiration for one of the big broadcasting chains to hire him as chief announcer.

Prosecuting attorneys throughout this big, broad land agree that one of their major problems is to cope with the Lady-Who-Weeps-on-the-Witness-Stand-During-Cross-Examination. This type of woman, according to prosecutors, disconcerts jurors almost as much as the old-fashioned lady witness, who used to show her ankle and toss notes to the 12 good men and true. What's to be done about it? Well, here's what's to be done about it. Hosea G. Deakes (above) proposes that jurors be permitted to take turns holding the witness on their none-too-ample laps—and by the time they have lost their respective watches, fountain pens and lodge badges they will begin to see the viewpoint of the big, bold prosecutor.

Miss Goodspeed submitting to cross-examination.

WASHINGTON — Congressman Horace Frisby's proposal to have all consumers join him in a solidarity group, and form a code, met with varied response at the national capital today. Here is a cross-section of public reaction—

Minnie Goodspeed, janitress: "I do not care to discuss publicly any proposal from Congressman Frisby at this time."

Horace Walpole Frisby: "I am staggered by the gigantic possibilities, and confounded by the import of my own words."

J. ("Mules Feet") O'Dowd, bootlegger: "It ain't Mr. Frisby's proposal that staggered him."

Mrs. Gloster Smythe-Jones, society matron: "Congressman Frisby asked for a complimentary box at the horse show for his Consumers' Union. I told him where he could go—and I never seen a man take it so hard or use such abusive language to a lady."

Comments from the foreign press reflected the same general attitude as the American press—extreme caution and restraint from mere mention.

A Lesson in Lawn Tennis

It Is Also a Lesson in THINKING

MERCER BEASLEY, TENNIS COACH OF THE LAWRENCEVILLE SCHOOL, WITH TWO YOUNG MEN COACHED BY HIM TO CHAMPIONSHIP: ON HIS RIGHT ELSWORTH VINES, JR., CHAMPION OF THE UNITED STATES; ON HIS LEFT, FRANK PARKER, NATIONAL JUNIOR CHAMPION.

Millions of young people will be interested in this picture, from Mercer Beasley's book, "How to Play Tennis."

If you rea dthis book or ever have the good fortune to be "coached" by Mercer Beasley, you will find that in tennis, as in everything else, success depends more on what you have inside of your skull than on nimbleness of feet, strength of wrists and arms, or even quickness of sight.

Mr. Beasley, coach of the "tennis squad" at the Lawrenceville School for Boys, of which Dr. Mather A. Abbott is headmaster, also coaches the young men at Princeton University, and is called the best tennis coach, which means the most successful in the production of great players.

The boys at Lawrenceville, all of whom have the benefit of Mr. Beasley's coaching, whether on the tennis squad or not, are taught by him first to use their brains; second, to "keep the eye on the ball" and that all else is comparatively unimportant.

Mr. Beasley emphasizes especially the importance of KNOWING IN ADVANCE WHAT YOU ARE GOING TO DO.

This world would be better off, in individual and in government success, if men could make up their minds in advance what they are going to do, instead of waiting until the last hour, minute or second and doing something, hit or miss.

At this stage of training, Mr. Beasley, coaching, requires the young man on whom he concentrates, to call out, in advance, just where he is going to place the approaching ball. And he must call out his decision concerning that ball before the ball actually crosses the net as it comes toward him.

This means that decision must be as quick as eyesight. And, having once made up his mind what to do with the ball when his racquet gets it, he must do exactly as he has decided to do, never changing at the last minute. As he sees the ball come he must make a plan and go through with it. Successful results in everything are based on successful planning and Mr. Beasley insists that boys shall apply that law in their tennis.

Mr. Beasley tells the boys of Lawrenceville that "the basic principle of tennis is accuracy, not strength."

That statement applies to all sorts of efforts. Success would be simple if strength were the only thing required. Accuracy in tennis means, says Mr. Beasley, "the ability to return the ball to any desired point of the court. That is the secret of tennis. There is a player who is able to place the ball, with any of his strokes, within two feet of the spot where he wants it to go. He is not a hard hitter; he doesn't have to be. But he is a champion. He is an exponent of developed accuracy."

The emphasis that Mr. Beasley puts on "keeping your eye on the ball" can be made to apply all through life.

Keep your MIND, THOUGHT, INTEREST, WILL POWER, every energy that you possess on the job that you have on hand, on doing it well, and doing it better.

Mr. Beasley writes:

"The easiest way to learn how to keep your eye on the ball is to learn how properly to catch a ball.

"So put down your racquet for a moment and take a position about five feet behind the base line.

"Place your hands on your knees, as a baseball player does, and assume a comfortable crouch, ready to start off quickly in any direction.

"Tennis balls are now hit to you easily from the other side of the net.

"KEEP YOUR EYE ON THE BALL as it comes over the net, bounces in the court; watch it and watch nothing else until it is safely in your hands. You should actually see the ball enter the fingers of your hands.

"Now do the same thing with only one hand, the right hand (or the left, if you are left-handed). Watch the ball, catch it, see it actually enter the fingers of the hand.

"When you have succeeded in doing this, you have learned how to keep your eye on the ball. Never forget it. Never stop keeping your eye on the ball. Make this a subconscious action. Make it your tennis law."

MERCER BEASLEY, TENNIS COACH AT LAWRENCEVILLE SCHOOL.

The small picture in this column shows Mr. Beasley watching the Lawrenceville boys carrying out his instructions. You can see that he knows how to keep his eye on the ball and on the boys.

Mr. Beasley's book, "How to Play Tennis," published by Doubleday, Doran & Co., Inc., can be bought at any good book store or sporting goods store.

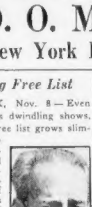
Dwindling Free List

NEW YORK, Nov. 8—Even with the Rialto's dwindling shows, the first night free list grows slimmer. It is now confined to regular critics and a few columnists. Once it included friends of producers, stars and friends of the playwright and even costumers.

At the Winter Garden, the largest of the musical show houses, there were only 61 complimentaries for the opening night. John Chapman reports even Joe Cook, the star, laid out $600 for 100 friends and relatives. Five years ago all downstairs seats of any choice were "Annie Oakleys."



O. O. McIntyre

Noel Coward is reputedly the stubbornest of the sticklers for a limited first night list. He wants it, confined only to critics. Earl Carroll wants to go Coward one better and make critics pay full tariff just like the rest of the folk.

Producers must pay because most theaters and producing organizations are now controlled by financing organizations — cold hearted bankers who see no reason to cut down their intake. The idea is, of course, splendid for those who participate in royalties. Free tickets were getting out of bounds.

Upton Sinclair was the most interviewed literary figure of the year on his recent visit to New York. The reason is simple. He makes copy. The reporter who visits him with no idea at all finds that after a few words Sinclair has tossed him a lead. He bivouacked among the literati at the Algonquin. Heretofore his hangouts have been around The Village.

The old Wendell home on 39th street and the avenue continues to furnish its decaying shudder to passersby. Since passing of the final member of the strange household and the more recent demise of the dog "Tobey," the musty brick structure in its mortal lapse has taken on a shadowy, thoughtful gloom. Imagination gives it an aura of something portentious within—mysterious closets, secret stairs, hidden panels. On the south side a broken shutter flaps in a stiff wind. Curtains upstairs are soiled and the panes suggest a ben-house window.

There was a clear summer night, walking a dog on the avenue around midnight that I saw one of the Wendel sisters. The street was desolate of traffic and pedestrians. I saw a light blnb in the hall while passing across the street. Finally the door opened and a shawled head protruded, looked up and down. A policeman came from around the corner, as though timed. She called to him and handed a letter out. He took it to a mail box, dropped it and went on whistling. I told the cop of my curiosity. "Every Tuesday around midnight," he said, "she has a letter posted. That was Miss Ella."

There has developed a how-have-you-been with a high-handshake attitude about the middle west in New York of late. Of course, it's petty jealousy, but something should be done. Glen Frank has perhaps the best solution. He suggests renaming the area "the central empire." That will high-tone 'em.

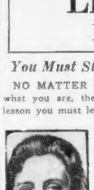
Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

You Must Stand Alone

NO MATTER who you are or what you are, there is one great lesson you must learn in life—



Elsie Robinson

YOU MUST LEARN TO STAND ALONE.

It won't be easy for you to learn that lesson. You'll find endless excuses for evading it, and some of the excuses will seem beautiful and noble. But you'll soon find that, no matter how clever the excuse, how beautiful or noble, Life won't accept it.

YOU MUST LEARN TO STAND ALONE.

Have you ever watched a baby learning to walk? How timidly the little feet take those first stumbling steps! How closely the tiny fingers cling to any support—the mother's hand, the table edge! And even after the feet have learned their trick, the small hands continue to cling, not daring to trust their own strength.

Babyhood is swiftly passed. But baby ways are not as easily cured. Long after we have learned to walk and run, our minds still reach for help; still cling to some beloved object for comfort and support. All our lives we cling to something. We die clinging.

We cling to THINGS. We are so sure that if we can only catch the THINGS we desire, life will be free and strong and happy. If we can own a nice home, a good car, the right clothes, a tidy sum in the bank—then everything will be jake. Frantically we scramble to achieve this dream.

Then at last we have what we want. But are we satisfied? No. After the first flush of success, back comes the old restlessness and uncertainty; the old discontent. Maybe if we had something more—something better. So we stumble on, reaching, clutching, dropping one thing to grab at the other—wondering why we are never satisfied.

We cling to PEOPLE, too. Surely that can't be wrong! No it isn't wrong to love. But it's wrong to lean on love—to expect love to sustain us, when we should sustain ourselves. But we won't see this. We pour out our hearts in adoration. Surely if we love hard enough this precious comfort will stay with us always.

Then the inevitable happens. Those we love insist on leading their own lives, as they should. We clutch at them desperately. We tell them how terribly we need them. They listen impatiently, tenderly, but we see—how bitterly we see!—that their minds are elsewhere. They are thinking of their own work, their own needs, their own ambitions or love affairs.

Or sometimes Death swoops down and breaks the clutch of our desperate, adoring fingers.

So THINGS fail us. And PEOPLE fail us. And at least WE MUST STAND ALONE.

But even then we will not admit that it is right and necessary for us to stand alone. Instead, we set up a great wailing. We cry that life isn't worth while if we haven't the things we want; if we haven't the people we love. We moan that our lives are ruined.

And we grow bitter and angry. We punish the people who won't let us use their lives as leaning posts. We cry out against a system which won't permit us all to be millionaires. We blame everyone but our own selves for our loneliness, our gnawing restlessness, our fear and heart break.

But we're wrong. They're not to blame. Our suffering has come because we ourselves have broken the first, the most important law of life—that law that we MUST STAND ALONE.

Does that mean that we shouldn't love others, work with others, struggle and acquire and achieve? Not at all. It's right to work and love. It's natural to rejoice in love and achievement. But it's wrong to expect people and possessions to do for us those things which we should do for ourselves.

IT'S WRONG FOR US TO EXPECT SOME LOVED ONE, SOME CHERISHED POSSESSION, TO GIVE US THAT PLEASURE AND POWER AND PEACE WHICH WE SHOULD ACHIEVE FOR OURSELVES, WITHIN OUR OWN CHARACTERS.

Just Folks

How to Be Cheerful

How to be cheerful, do you say,
When the wind is cold and the skies are gray?
How to be cheerful? Just one way;
Forget yourself for awhile today.

Never mind self and your irksome cares.
Somebody else greater burden bears.
Stretch out a helping hand and play
The friend to all who may chance your way.

You'll never be cheerful sitting there
Sorrowing over the hurts you bear,
For never a joyous hour is known
By the man who thinks of himself alone.

How to be cheerful? Scatter cheer;
Share your life with your neighbors here;
Encourage the weary and comfort the sad
And you'll find more joy than you've ever had.

Dry Law Repeal Speeded By State Conventions

By James T. Williams, Jr.

It is taking the American people much less time to remove prohibition from the federal constitution than it took them to put it there.

This is because Congress prescribed one method for the ratification of the 18th Amendment, which added prohibition to the constitution, and another method for the enactment of the amendment providing for repeal of prohibition.

The 18th Amendment was submitted o ha several states for ratification by the 65th Congress, Dec. 13, 1917. It took three-fourths of the states more than a year to ratify this amendment, Jan. 29, 1919.

The Twenty-first Amendment, which repeals the Eighteenth Amendment, was submitted for ratification by the Seventy-second Congress on Feb. 20, 1933. It will be formally ratified on or about Dec. 5 of the the same year when the state conventions elected this week for that purpose meet to carry out their mandate.

As the late James Bryce tells us in the American Commonwealth, "The men who sat in the convention of 1787, were not sanguine enough, like some of the legislating sages of antiquity, or like such imperial confiders as the Emperor Justinian, to suppose that their work could stand unaltered for all time to come."

The framers of the Constitution wisely provided in Article V two methods of framing and proposing amendments.

1. Congress, by a two-thirds vote in each house may prepare and propose amendments.

2. The legislatures of two-thirds of the states may require Congress to convene a Constitutional Convention.

TWO METHODS

The two methods of enacting amendments set forth in Article V are:

1. The legislatures of three-fourths of the states may ratify any amendments submitted to them.

2. Conventions may be called in the several states, and three-fourths of these conventions may ratify.

Whereas the Constitution has been amended, the amendment has been prepared and proposed by Congress. No drafting convention of the several states has ever been summoned.

When the Constitution itself was submitted for ratification, it was prescribed that the ratifying method should be by conventions called in the several states.

All amendments to the Constitution have hitherto been ratified by the legislatures of three-fourths of the states. The 21st or repeal amendment is the first in which Congress prescribed ratification by state conventions.

Experience has proved the wisdom of the state convention method of ratification. Had Congress provided for the enactment of the repeal amendment by the legislatures of three-fourths of the states, it might have taken the American people years instead of months to get rid of the evils of prohibition.

It would have been much easier for organized minorities in the several states which are still opposed to the repeal of prohibition to work their will with the state legislatures and delay ratification of the repeal amendment.

CHILD LABOR

The superiority of the State convention method of ratifying an amendment to the federal constitution, as Postmaster General Farley has pointed out, lies in the fact that it gives the whole voting population of the states a chance to have their will about one of the most vital duties which an American citizen is called upon to perform—amending the federal constitution.

Since its adoption in 1787, more than 3000 amendments have been offered in Congress to the federal constitution. Of these only 26 have been submitted by Congress to the states for approval, and only 21 of these have received the consent of three-fourths of the states required for ratification.

Of the amendments still pending, the only one upon which state legislatures are still voting is the Child Labor Amendment. Fifteen states have ratified this amendment, and it is being pressed for ratification in a majority of the other states.

Had Congress prescribed the state convention method for ratifying the Child Labor Amendment, it would probably now be in effect. Special interests supporting child labor find it easier to prevent action by state legislatures on this amendment than they would to defeat its ratification by state conventions elected directly by the people for that purpose.

Human Side of the News

Old Man River. He'll Match His Mighty Will Against Army Strait-jacket

By Edwin C. Hill

The Father of Waters—the Mississippi—Old Man River! In all America, in the whole world, there is nothing to match his old pagan, his so-human river, with a will of its own. And now we learn that the United States government, the army engineers, are tackling the biggest job that ever came their way; bigger, by far, than committing a surgical operation on the backbone of a continent, digging the Panama Canal. For they are setting about to reform the ancient vagabond about whom there is something so strangely human.

They are going to try to put Old Man River in chains. They are going to try to break him of his habit of wandering as he will, of his fits of temper, of his prolonged and hilarious sprees. They are preparing a straight-jacket for Old Man River so that commerce can have a nine-foot channel all the way from New Orleans to Minneapolis.

But if one were going to bet on the struggle—for fight it will be, and one of the most dramatic ever waged—I think your money should go down on Old Man River. For however great the energy and skill of the Army engineers, they are up against something complex, majestic and terrific in its lazy, silent, contemptuous power, Old Man River, he don't 'do nothing, he don't say nothing, he just keeps rolling along.

WHAT HE WANTS

Always he has been a personality, this Old Man River. He was more than a river to the Indians. To the Negroes he is as much of a person, far more so, indeed, than any creature who walks on two legs.

Down in Natchez, Miss., the old river threatens a cemetery. With a strange persistency it keeps gnawing away at the bluff upon which the cemetery rests. If you ask the Negroes why Old Man River is steadily and suilently taking that cemetery to himself, the Negroes will tell you people are buried there who lost their lives in the Mississippi, who were drowned in its yellow flood over long years.

And they will tell you that the river doesn't like to have its victims thus robbed and buried, and that it feels just like a cat that has been deprived of a mouse. What Old Man River wants as he gnaws at the old cemetery is to get what belongs to it. Dig up the bones of the drowned and put them back and Old Man Mississippi will let that cemetery alone.

The skeptical and the enlightened smile at such superstitious talk, but their smiles are uneasy, for they know that the old river has a whimsicality all its own, a mordant humor, and that it often does exactly what a practical joker would do to it. He is as easily bored, Old Man River. Constantly he wearies of following the same channel. He yearns for new places and new faces. And so at one point he will leave the old path and wander far from it, and then come back when he is tired of his ramble.

PRANKSOME CHILDREN

Neither dikes nor levees can stop him for long. He must have his way, his whimsical, jesting way, playing strange tricks with the best laid plans of the angry engineers, chuckling and laughing at them as he lopes along down through the country, draining 26 states on his majestic way.

And he has a brood of sons and daughters as willful and capricious as their scapegrace old father—the hollow-legged Missouri, which join him just above St. Louis; the sensitive Ohio, which takes his arm at Cairo and goes off cavorting and rollicking with him all the way through the land of cotton and the land of sugar to the weird Delta and the great blue Gulf; the almost Tennessee, with all the arts and graces of a flirtatious lady, and the deceitful Arkansas and the romping Red and all the rest of his prankSome, temperamental children.

Most of the time he moves quietly, Old Man River, and at such times there is a monotony about him, as of a wise man telling folks that hustle and hustle gets no one anywhere, and that there are times for hurrying as well as times when the best thing to do is—don't say nothing and don't do nothing, but keep on rolling along.

HE ALWAYS REPENTS.

And there are other times when he loses his temper, and whips himself with storms, and bulges his mighty chest, and strides swiftly southward with the debris of high water riding on his crest—trees and bushes torn from the caving banks, and houses wrenched from the shore, and dead animals, and sometimes live creatures riding with frightened eyes down the mighty flood.

But always he repents when he has let his anger master him, and then, in the rosy dawn or the soft twilight, one sees far down his current to the misty, tremulous pictures he has to offer.

He is dreaming, then, Old Man River, thinking his thoughts, scheming his schemes, brooding over his likes and his pagan god that he is; sure of his power and his influence over the people that live along his banks and know him best, and his mysterious and majestic influence.
